Bedford County Agriculture Students Have Field Day

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

BAKERS SUMMIT (Bedford County) — More than 130 students participated in the annual Junior Holstein Field Bedford County Field Day held this year at the Kenneth Mowry Farm, Martinsburg RD 2.

Taking top honors in the junior division Holstein judging competition were Galen McDonald, a 9th grader from Chestnut Ridge and Richard Bowman, a 9th grader at Northern Bedford County High School.

Placing first in the senior division was Susie Mowry, a senior at Northern Bedford, and Alisha McDonald, Chestnut Ridge, placed second.

The 1200-acre Mowry farm has a herd of more than 300 Holsteins.

Dick Dale of the Bedford County Extension Office spoke on crops and management.

Dr. Dave Welsh, Somerset, gave a talk on tracking and breeding milk cows. His presentation was highlighted with a bovine uterus.

Steve Mowry, of the Mowry Farm, demonstrated this farm family's manure pit.

Refreshments for the students were provided by the Bedford Farm Bureau Co-op and Purina Mills.

Ag students participated from Bedford, Northern Bedford, Chestnut Ridge, and Central high schools.

"You can't believe how well waterways, terraces, and diversions work until you see it," Robert Eberle said.

He and his wife Betty received the 1990 Snyder County "Conservation Farmer of the Year" award for the conservation practices installed on their 500-acre Port Trevorton farm.

Damaged Fields Mend: Farmer Cited For Conservation Methods

PORT TREVORTON (Snyder Co.) — Thunder rumbled across the rolling farmland of Robert and Betty Eberle. Torrential rains slashed the fields into gullies that snaked down the freshly plowed hillsides.

In dismay, Robert Eberle watched as the rushing water tore off fertile top soil and dumped it on a muddy heap at the bottom of the towering hillsides.

"We've got to do something," he told his wife Betty. "These storms are destroying our fields."

That was three years ago.

State Grangers Meet, Discuss Rural Issues

VERNON ACHENBACH, JR,
Lancaster Farming Staff

GRANTVILLE (Dauphin Co.) — Rural health care, swampbusting provisions and possible direction of the 1990 Farm Bill were the top items of concern during Monday night's annual meeting of the the Pennsylvania State Grange held at the Holiday Inn, here.

An estimated 270 Grange members also celebrated National and state Grange week and talked with state legislators about possible cures to perceived problems.

An afternoon series of eight workshops covered topics from floral art to an update on work on the 1990 Farm Bill and rural health care.

Emily Gruss, with the Center for Rural Pennsylvania, talked about some of the problems with declining rural health care and advances made toward securing a dependable service.

According to Gruss, the Center was created by the state General Assembly because a number of issues concerning rural life were not being addressed.

"Although some issues were being taken care of pretty well (farm issues and the agricultural issues), there are a lot of issues related to rural areas that weren't being addressed; things like rural health care, but also rural economic development in general, and transportation issues," Gruss said.

"We were created to fill that void," she said. "Our job is to identify issues of concern in rural Pennsylvania, and then develop state policy recommendations to address those."

Gruss said that rural health care today is simple and can be described as family doctor centered.

As a native of Portage, a rural area, she said she has her own experience to call on, when it comes to rural health issues.

She said her mother had recently broken a rib and had to drive one half-hour to Johnstown for care. More serious injuries require trips to more distant and better facilities.

In comparison to more specialized medical facilities in high-population areas, such as Philadelphia, Gruss said the rural demand is more for "a doctor and a hospital."

However, she said that recent changes in rural demographics and related health care needs has created a higher demand for physicians, while at the same time incentives to be a rural physician have been cut drastically.

"There's more of a need for them (rural doctors). The rural population is increasingly an elderly population," she said. "I know in my hometown the only new business that was started

PSU College Of Ag Provides Powerful Engineering Program

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.)—One of the four-year degree programs in the College of Agriculture here at Penn State provides a really powerful course for agriculture engineering students. This is true because the course combines basic engineering technology, the agriculture sciences and business management.

Dr. Dennis Buffington, professor and department head, explained the programs and conducted a tour of his facilities last week for visitors to the University as part of the regular meeting of the Ag Advisory Council.

"Ag engineering is the application of engineering to agriculture," Buffington said. "By agriculture we mean the larger definiton that includes food processing and environmental concerns. But farming is a large part of it."

At the time of the visit, students

NY & Phila. Frozen Eggs

April 24, 1990

Trade sentiment was cautious as dealers closely watched related markets for direction. Whole eggs were generally steady, whites were fully steady to instances firm, while yolks were weak. Buyers were selective. Breakers usually worked full schedules packing against new and previous commitments. Floor stocks were in good balance for current needs.

Trucklot buying interest was light and unaggressive except for wings, which were short of some traders needs. Supplies of skinned boneless breasts were generally well balanced at unchanged prices. Whole breasts were fully adequate to ample and excess supplies were traded at lower price levels. Legs were fully adequate. Leg quarters were fully adequate to ample despite fairly heavy retail ad activity and inquiry for later deliveries. Thighs and drums were adequate with thighs in the closer balance with trade needs.

Delmarva Broiler-Fryer Report

Wednesday, April 18, 1990

Movement of ready-to-cook whole fryers was light. Supplies of 2 1/2 pound sizes were short of immediate needs, but heavier sizes were fully adequate and being offered at competitive prices. Less than trucklot asking prices were steady at 55-64 cents. Live supplies were adequate. Average live weights ranged desirable to heavy. Today's processing schedules were moderately heavy. The trade sentiment was unsettled but barely steady at best. In the parts complex, supplies of cutlets and wings were in close balance to instances short of needs, legs were adequate, and whole breasts and leg quarters were fully adequate to ample and slow to clear even with lower asking prices.

Farm Credit Bankers Have Long Been Recognized For Achievements In The Field.

Farm Credit bankers possess their share of prestigious achievement awards. But more often than not, the awards they're most proud of are the ones they've earned in, say, conservation, dairy, or veterinary science.

Not many bankers can say that.

That's because most Farm Credit loan officers were born and raised on farms. They grew up active in 4-H and FFA. Many even got their college degrees from ag schools.

What's more, every one of our loan officers goes through the toughest ag lending training program in America.

And because our loan officers understand farming as well as financing, they're not only smarter. They're faster. In fact, they have the power of loan approval equal to most bank presidents'.

So stop by soon and talk with your nearby Farm Credit loan officer. Because whenever you need some extra help in your field, you'll want to work with the banker most accomplished in his.

FARM CREDIT®

SOMETIMES FIXING THE FIGHT IS THE SMARTEST THING TO DO.

To knock out foxtail, crabgrass, pigweed and lambsquarter, start the fight early with Bicep,® the foundation herbicide for economical control of tough weeds all season long. Applied up to 30 days prior to planting, Bicep stops tough weeds as they germinate, to keep corn yields up and weed pressure down.

We recommend Bicep because it delivers the best broad spectrum control available in a premix at a low cost. Even with the superior performance of Bicep, triazine resistant weeds can be a problem. Ask us about a program featuring Bicep to control all of your tough weeds.

This season, fight smart. Use Bicep.

"Don't let Casey give farm kids the axe"

says Ken Brandt

Ag Republican Ken Brandt is a nine-term state representative from northwestern Lancaster county and Republican chairman of the House ag committee.

How you can help farm kids

Ask your state senator and representative for his support in restoring funds for Future Farmers, and all underfunded ag programs.

Other vocational students need help, too. The governor budgeted an extra $84,000,000 for basic education but cut vocational funds by $63,000. He also chopped out $195,000 for vocational student organizations.

To learn more about Ag Republicans, write us at address below.

Here goes Governor Casey again—balancing the 1990-91 budget on the backs of our farm kids.

The governor also chopped ag research, marketing, promotions, PDA. By millions. But absolutely the most unforgiveable cut, in my mind, is the big fat "0" for FFA Foundation.

It's not much — $33,000, but it says a lot about Mr. Casey's credibility as an ag advocate.

Let's look at the facts:

1. Fully 20% of the jobs in Pennsylvania are on the farm or ag related. And no youngsters are better trained for these jobs... or more dedicated... than our FFA boys and girls. Some 7,800 of them.

2. Most Future Farmers depend on vo-ag classes for such basics as agronomy, animal husbandry, ag engineering and environmental sciences. It's the FFA Foundation that provides hands-on experience with its contests and activities.

It makes little sense to preserve farms if we don't preserve future farmers.

Drop the ball now, Mr. Casey, and we all will be the worse for it. Consumers as well as producers. City as well as rural residents.

I can promise you this. As a Republican legislator, I'll work to restore those funds. For our Future Farmers. For all agriculture.

OPINION

Happy Earth Week And Many More

To be sure our planet Earth, has a healthy future people need to get in touch with the world in which they live.

Often we, especially in agriculture, complain that society is not in touch with the needs and requirements of farming because there are so many who are generations removed from working the earth.

Perhaps the just completed observance of Earth Week will help change some of that. Maybe nature was seen as it really is--the only thing within reach in this universe that can sustain life.

The reason for an Earth Week should be to get across to everyone a sense of permanence — permanence, that is defined as once done, there is no return; like breaking a tooth, losing hair, growing old . . . destroying a stream, a mountain, a field, or losing a species.

Earth Week is a symbol to live for tomorrow, to leave an inheritance for our children and grandchildren.

So what should be done in Earth Week?

Walk.

In order to understand how nature works, it is necessary to see it, to witness it. The way this can be done is through the senses; sight, hearing, smell, touch, taste. These are the means by which the human brain stays in contact with reality.

A ride in a car, even on a horse, is considerably faster than the normal speed of travel at which man's senses were designed to respond well.

At too fast a speed, the eye can not react quickly enough, things blur, the same is true with smelling and hearing. A blur, a sensory numbing is, unfortunately what most of us are used to in these times. Even those who traditionally have been in most contact with reality are pushed to speeds beyond any reasonable ability to sense what it happening around them.

Don't talk.

Talking interferes with the ears. The human voice is loud and drowns out the sounds of the Earth. Stay quiet and listen to the songs of the birds, the fowl, dogs, cattle, insects. If you can't hear these things, something is wrong.

Keep your mind on the present and don't bring in self-centered concerns while observing.

Witnessing the here and now is the only way to see what has been done in the past and what needs to be done for the future.

No songs, spats, memories, or other interests should clog the brain from doing the best job it can at receiving signals from the senses.

Also, those who can only see things as they benefit themselves run a risk of being strongly deluded.

For example, if one man sees a stream void of fish, he may see it through a perspective that a compromise made in the name of more jobs and a stronger tax base means better personal and community health. In effect, that man may go away thinking everything is fine.

Another may see it as a drainage ditch running clearly and not in danger of flooding the local banks. Again, he may go away under the delusion that everything is fine.

A photographer may see the bouncing light and shadows and shapes and designs. He may walk away thinking it is a great place, to take photographs.

All three are seeing the same stream, but due to what they want to make it mean, they will all walk away thinking they saw something different. Most probably won't even notice the absence of fish.

The point is, what really is, isn't always what we want it to be. If you want to see it for itself, don't think about what it is for you.

Take time to witness the world. It's all around you.

Happy Earth Week to you and many more.

NOW IS THE TIME

To Practice Pesticide Safety

Pesticides are very important to our highly efficient agriculture. When used as directed, they repay our growers with higher, better quality yields at minimal risk to our safety and health.

 It's important to choose the correct pesticide and application equipment for your particular problem.

 Be sure to read and follow the label directions. Make sure all co-workers do the same.

 Without fail, use the recommended personal protective equipment to prevent harmful contact with chemicals.

 Mix accurately and carefully. Clean up spills. Return unused materials to safe storage.

 Triple rinse and drain empty containers into spray tank.

 Clean the equipment when you have finished. Don't smoke or eat until you have washed and changed clothing.

Let's have a safe growing and harvesting season this year.

To Be Alert For Alfalfa Weevil

Now may be a good time to begin scouting your alfalfa fields for weevils, according to Robert Anderson, Extension Agronomy Agent. The past two years, weevils were seen by this time feeding on alfalfa that was less than 4 inches tall. With the mild winter and the number of fields which were infested last year, alfalfa growers may have a severe problem this year. The weevil had not been a problem for many years after the introduction of a parasite in the early 1960's. After its introduction, the parasite had almost eliminated the weevil.

Unless controlled, the alfalfa weevil will cause severe losses in the weight and quality of the first cutting. Weevils feed within the plant tips and on the upper leaves as they open. Leaves will be skeletonized by the feeding. Damaged leaves dry rapidly and fields take on a grayish to whitish cast under severe feeding.

Control of the alfalfa weevil should be based on the number of larva feeding, the height of the alfalfa, and the cost of the spray. Penn State has developed a system of scouting which will determine the economic threshold based on the three criteria. If you call your County Cooperative Extension Office, they can send you a copy of "A Pest Management Program for Alfalfa in Pennsylvania."

To Prepare For Soybean Planting

Soybeans should be planted in warm moist soil. A thermometer will help you decide when is the best planting date. Special bayonet type thermometers work very well.

The ideal temperature is about 62° F. The reading should be taken at about 8:00 a.m. when the soil temperature is stabilized. The thermometer should be inserted at least two inches in the soil.

Many people planting soybeans will either end up with too many plants per acre or too few. This will happen because they will use the pounds per acre philosophy which won't work for soybeans. Because soybean seed differs greatly in size, this also means they differ greatly in number of seeds per pound. For example, one variety may average 2,100 seeds per pound while another variety averages 3,100 seeds per pound...that's a difference of 1,000 seeds per pound. So, if you plant a bushel of seed with 85% germination, that's a difference of about 48,000 plants per acre.

The only way to plant beans is by seeds per foot of row. If a grain drill is used, three beans per foot of row is plenty. If a 30 inch corn row is used 8 to 9 beans per foot is about right.

Farm Forum

Editor,

I am writing in response to Secretary Boyd's letter concerning the Department of Agriculture's support of the FFA program.

I am sure we are thankful to the Secretary for the Fair Fund money. But the issue at hand is state support for statewide FFA programs. Those figures he presented makes it seem as if the Pennsylvania FFA Association is

THE BIBLE SPEAKS
BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

A HERESY OF DEEDS

April 29, 1990

Background Scripture:
1 John 2:18-29
Devotional Reading:
2 Corinthians 13:5-14.

I'll have to confess that I struggled with this text for a long time before it said anything to me - or before I heard it say something to me. John's concern in this passage, in fact most of the letter, seems far removed from our own situation today. He is steamed up over former Christians who have become heretics. I wouldn't suggest for a moment that heresy is not a problem today for the Church, but that it doesn't rank at the top of our concerns. What John was concerned about was a heresy called Docetism, a name taken from the Greek word 'dokein,' meaning to seem or to appear. To make a rather complex situation simple, the Docetists believed that Jesus was not really a physical human being, but only "seemed" or "appeared" to be. It was as if God had donned a human disguise in order to come among us. This was because they regarded as the incompatible an incorruptible and spiritual God becoming a corruptible and material person.

THE INCARNATION

Orthodox (meaning approved, conventional, or approved) Christianity held that in Jesus both the divine and human were manifest - "fully God and fully man." The central mystery of Christianity has always been the paradox of God and humanity in one person. The early Christians firmly believed that Jesus was not God pretending to be human, anymore than he was a human pretending to be God.

Actually, my experience in the church - which, of course, is that of just one person - has been that, although Docetism long ago was denounced as hersey, it is still very much with us today. Many of the depictions of Jesus - in print, in art, on film, and even in sermons - are Docetic: that of a God who only appears to be a man. Popular conceptions of Jesus always, it seems to me, stress his divinity at the expense of his humanity.

DIVINELY IRRELEVANT

Does that matter? I believe it does, because a Docetic Christ is largely irrelevant to human life. If we overemphasize the divinity of Christ, we make him so different from us that nothing he did or said seems applicable to us. Jesus loved even the "worst" of people, but we can say, "Of course, but then he was divine!" and that removes that obligation from us who are merely human. If Jesus is to be relevant to us, he must have known what we know and experience what we experience, including the terrible pull of temptation.

But Jesus made it clear that his disciples are to do all that he did, if need be, to lay down our lives for others. Actually, the bottom line of John's teaching is that deeds are even more important than beliefs. "If you know that he is righteous, you may be sure that everyone who does right is born of him" (1 John 2:29). "Does right" takes precedence over "things right," although both do better when they are equal in our lives.

Ideas and beliefs are important, because they motivate us in the choices we make. Heretical ideas can be very harmful, but even worse is the heresy of unrighteous deeds.

Bob Wiker of Ronks, PA says his AgTec "retired" his Brand X Sprayer

"The other sprayer would not penetrate sweet corn and I had to save the crop I talked to a neighbor about my problem and he said the AgTec was the only sprayer to use in sweet corn So I bought the AgTec and it gave me what I needed in the field — penetration I got the coverage I needed and I had clean corn"

"Then I tried it on my other crops — tomatoes, cabbage, cauliflower, broccoli and brussel sprouts Now I spray all 77 acres with Ag-Tec"

"I can't afford to use the other sprayer on my vegetables The AgTec cuts the cost of chemical application and saves me time in the field which I can use elsewhere That's a deal I'll take anytime"

LOWER ENERGY! LESS LABOR! IDEAL GROWING CONDITIONS!

The Pal-Tech computer controlled natural ventilation system saves electricity by eliminating power ventilation fans and inlets and by replacing energy leaking curtains with insulated sealed panels. The Pal-Tech computer controlled natural ventilation system takes advantage of warm contaminated air's natural tendency to rise to the peak of a building. The computer opens various combinations of Pal-Tech ridge vents and wall vents to purge the house of contaminated air and control humidity and ammonia. It can cross-ventilate (end-to-end) to balance temperature and keep the entire building supplied with clean, fresh air. The grower simply enters target settings and since he has no fans, inlets, brooders, space heaters or curtains to adjust, this large, naturally ventilated building takes less labor than smaller conventional houses one third the size.

On The Record

Dick Barth

PA DHIA General Mgr.

Probably the most disliked aspect of DHIA is the Official rules.

Contrary to popular belief, however, the official rules are not primarily intended to provide a way to punish DHIA members, although that is sometimes the result of them. They are designed to provide a uniform standard for the collection, processing and use of DHIA record information across the United States. And in that regard, they are absolutely essential to the record keeping business.

Also contrary to what some may think, management and staff do not make the rules, nor does USDA. They are made by dairymen leaders, producers just like you, who take their responsibility seriously and are dedicated to protecting your economic investment in DHIA records services.

Many readers will be aware that Pennsylvania DHIA has taken a tough stand on this issue over the past four to five years and has been successful in ridding the association of significant fraudulent activity by members. It's been neither easy, nor cheap.

Literally hundreds of thousands of dollars have been spent in staff time, legal fees and board expenses to assure that members' records can be trusted. The bad news is the cost of doing it, but the good news is that we haven't lost a single battle so far. It is essential work that must be on-going to be effective and affordable.

Although we have made progress, we can and need to do better in this area. There are still problems with proper cow identification, refusals to test, lack of cooperation by some members to provide needed information, and maybe even some fraud that has not yet been found. These problems continue because we cannot enforce the rules uniformly across Pennsylvania.

WHY NOT?

Local direction of DHIA supervisors is the major reason for the problem. Some local boards are very responsible, but others, too many others, do not insist that their employees enforce all the rules all the time.

They permit double standards to exist within circuits and within counties because they don't prevent supervisors from favoring some members over others by letting some rule violations slip by. Over time, small rule infractions that could have been nipped in the bud grow into large problems that take extra effort to solve.

I suppose you can't blame folks for ducking the problem though. After all, it's hard to blow the whistle on a neighbor, or a local board member, or a relative.

Some progress is being made through communication and education of supervisors and members, but it's extremely slow. Local boards are not skilled in handling these problems and board members turn over faster than they can be trained to provide the needed leadership on the issue. Supervisors also turn over faster than they can be trained (20-25% per year on average) and they often do not believe us when we say we will support them if they turn in a cheater. The trust level is poor all the way around.

CAN WE IMPROVE?

Yes, we can improve, but things have to change substantially to do it.

The key is to take local leadership off the hot seat and to provide objective review of all DHIA field services in the state. Supervisors who do not have to fear recrimination for reporting a rule violation, or who are supported on the farm to correct minor violations will do a much better job when they see that support is real.

Reorganization should have major impact on this problem. With supervisors responsible to state association employees, they will not need to wonder if they will be supported by their management staff.

Furthermore, clear signals about expectations of supervisors in this area can be given without local boards in between that may encourage supervisors to ignore rules problems; either directly because they tell supervisors not to bother with them, or indirectly because board members have given mixed signals over the years with inconsistent treatment of rules problems.

Life for the local board member should also improve in this area. They will not be asked to make decisions in areas they are not trained or experienced to handle. Therefore, local meetings will improve as board members are free to work on other problems that state staff need help with, like member communications and recruiting.

But the best overall benefit can come from the avoidance of legal liability for local board members because they would no longer bear responsibility for decision making about rule infractions.

This is a crucial issue for DHIA members and is the seventh major reason why reorganization is necessary if DHIA is to live up to its responsibility of providing the best services for the most reasonable price. If you have missed any of the previous six reasons, give me a call at 1-800-DHI-TEST and I'll send you a copy of the article that described it.

Average Farm Feed Costs For Handy Reference

To help farmers across the state to have handy reference of commodity input costs in their feeding operations for DHIA record sheets or to develop livestock feed cost data, here's this week's average costs of various ingredients as compiled from regional reports across the state of Pennsylvania. Remember these are averages so you will need to adjust your figures up or down according to your location and the quality of your crop.

Slow Down

SCRANTON (Lackawanna Co.) — After dramatic drops of 99 cents in January and $1.72 in February, many felt that the Minnesota - Wisconsin Price Series would continue its record breaking decline to match last year's record breaking increases.

Powder prices that fell from $1.50 in November to 86 cents in March weren't noticed as much as cheese prices that dropped 29 cents, most of which came on the first Friday in February. Both of these contributed to the $2.71 drop in the M-W in two months.

After the big drop in February, however, cheese prices stabilized at $1.26 and stayed there through March and powder prices held even with a slight increase in milk production in Wisconsin in February.

As a result, the M-W dropped only 20 cents in March, the lowest in five years, from $12.22 to $12.02 but still $1.04 better than last year and $2.12 above the support price of $9.88 for manufacturing grade milk.

Any drop in price is unwelcome to producers but the good news is that it was less than expected this month and may indicate the more normal adjustments that come at this time of the year. What happens next will depend on how fast and how much milk production increases this spring.

The best news for the months ahead is a nine-cent increase in block cheese prices from $1.28 to $1.37 the first week of April. If this demand continues and powder markets remain firm, the record high drops in the M-W may be over. A lot depends on the size of the spring flush.

Farm Price

However, the full impact of the 99-cent drop in the M-W in January was felt in the March Class I price, in addition to a 27-cent drop in the Class II price in Order 2 last month.

Add to that a 20-cent payment for the Louisville Plan and you get a 77-cent drop in the uniform or blend price from $14.22 to $13.45, before premiums for March in Order 2. That's about 20 cents higher than expected and indicates that prices may not fall as low this spring.

Also helping indirectly in Order 2 was the announcement by the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board to extend the $1.05 1988 disaster assistance premium on Class I milk to June 30, 1991.

Fat And The Farm Bill

Most of the attention given to the growing Commodity Credit Corporation stocks of butter centers on changing the calculation of milk equivalents in CCC purchases from a butterfat basis to something else like total solids or some dollar value. With so many dairy organizations asking for it, that may very well be part of the 1990 farm bill.

However, it does nothing to correct the problem of surplus fat production and may do nothing to increase the support price, depending on where the "triggers" for CCC purchases and price cuts are set.

Looking more closely at some of the farm bill proposals, you will find a number of suggestions; from tilting the CCC purchase price of butter so low that it will be more market competitive, to price reductions to producers who ship butterfat (in milk) in excess of some historical base on their farm.

The end result would be literally a two-tier price for butterfat — one price for the base pounds and another for the excess pounds.

However, before you start a "race for base" on butterfat, realize that these are only proposals at this time and the "triggers" of CCC butter purchases to start such a program vary from six percent over the market demand for butter to six billion pounds of milk equivalent in CCC purchases.

Last week the House Subcommittee approved a fat reduction program paid for by producers and triggered at CCC purchases of five billion pounds of milk equivalent. They also included a two-tier inventory management program when CCC purchases exceed seven billion pounds and approved a price support floor of $10.60 through 1995.

Remember, however, that this was only the proposal of the House Subcommittee which is far from the final vote of Congress where the farm bill will be decided.

What Problem?

Before you start worrying that you will be asked to produce skim milk in the future, you should get some perspective on the problem.

The national average for butterfat is 3.67 and it has been calculated that if it had been 3.5 there never would have been any purchases of butter by CCC last year.

We're not talking large drops in butterfat test but only about a tenth of one percent. Yes, I know that after generations of trying to keep butterfat tests up even a lowering of one point seems to be a radical change.

However, you may find that lowering the butterfat will be a lot easier than increasing it if you believe that only a third of the increases made in the last 30 years came from breeding.

There's no question that there's an increasing problem in selling butterfat and we're lucky to have the price support program to help you make the adjustment, but you may have to learn to live with lower fat production long after the 1990 farm bill is history.

National Hearings

Even before the 1990 farm bill got out of the sub committees in the House and Senate, USDA Secretary Clayton Yeutter announced a national hearing on Federal Milk-Marketing Orders in early September, which may be before the farm bill is passed.

The secretary has said that he would like Congress to leave Federal Order changes to the hearing process where they belong, rather than legislate them in a farm bill as they did with Class I differentials in 1985.

This opens up the chance for a lot of radial changes in Federal Orders including the possibility, although remote, of one national order or, not so remote, of a few regional orders even on the West Coast.

Submission of proposals by interested parties will end on May 31, but so far the secretary has indicated that they will include the use of multiple base points for setting Class I differentials which would mean the end of pricing as we know it now with the M-W series.

Also to be considered are Class II differentials for milk used in soft dairy products and a Class III price for butter, powder and cheese.

The old proposal on reconstituted milk that allows mixing powder and water to make fluid milk without any price adjustments will be back. These are radical changes in milk pricing and may affect your income far more and far longer than the 1990 farm bill.

Bone Up

To understand the importance of the changes suggested in federal Milk Marketing Orders, you may want to bone up on how your prices are determined under current orders.

There is a video tape on "Pricing Under Federal Milk Marketing Orders in Pennsylvania" available from county extension dairy agents along with some study and discussion material.

Removing Extra Teats

It is not unusual for heifers to be born with extra or supernumerary teats. Removing these extra teats at an early age can eliminate potential problems that can occur later in life, such as developing mastitis or interfering with milking. Removal of these teats will also improve the udder's appearance.

Checking for supernumerary teats can be done at the same time as dehorning or vaccinating. The extra teat should be gently pulled away from the udder and cupt with a pair of sharp scissors which have curved blades. Then spray the wound with iodine or other antiseptic.

If there is doubt which teats are supernumerary, or if they are located close to the other teats, have your veterinarian examine and remove these teats.

Intentions to discontinue the Lititz show came on the heels of an announcement by the State Department of Agriculture that Lititz and five other county fairs would share $1,999.80 in reimbursement payments for premiums distributed in the 1959 season.

The decision to discontinue the Lititz exposition was brought about by a general lack of interest and falling off of agricltural exhibits during the past few seasons. Lititz's share of the reimbursement payments would have amounted to $180.45.

Bovine Virus Diarrhea

Bovine Virus Diarrhea (BVD) has been diagnosed in several herds in southcentral Pennsylvania. In unvaccinated herds, BVD has caused serious illness and death in both mature cattle and calves. Dairy herds in any part of Pennsylvania should be on a vaccination program that includes BVD. Seek laboratory confirmation of respiratory and/or diarrheal disease causes(s) early in an outbreak.

Genetic Engineering Company Signs Contract

HOUSTON, Texas — Granada BioSciences Inc. has signed a five-year contract to furnish genetically superior Holstein embryos and technical services to dairy farmers in the northern Spanish Province of Cantabria.

The Texas-based biotechnology and genetic engineering company has had numerous overseas projects over the past nine years. However, this is the second major contract which employs Granada's advanced reproductive technologies, reported David G. Eller, Granada chairman. An earlier contract covers embryo cloning products and services in the United Kingdom.

"This new agreement is expected to yield revenues of $12 million over its life span," Eller said. "We've already received an order for 300 embryos and expect sales will be in excess of 5,000 during the balance of the year."

The provincial government of Cantabria will subsidize half the cost of participation for local dairy farmers, and is joining with Granada in marketing the program within the region, he said.

According to Juan Hormaechea, president, and Vicente de la Hera, secretary of Cattle, Agriculture and Fisheries for Cantabria, this is the first embryo transfer center in Spain.

"Not only will our dairy farmers have access to the best genetics available, our animals will be able to produce 15 to 18 calves per year instead of just one. The high quality of the imported embryos will make possible milk production of 10,000 kilos," Secretary de la Hera said.

Embryos from animals that exhibit superior peformance will be offered at a cost of $350 and $500 each. The embryos will be supplied jointly by Granada BioSciences Inc. and American Marketing Services of Richmond, Virginia.

Granada BioSciences will provide technical services to the project, including start-up supervision of Cantabria's newly-built embryo transfer center and the government's specially trained technicians, marketing assistance, and technical help in making the initial transfers.

Start-up of the project in Spain follows the February opening of Granada BioSciences' embryo center in Newcastle, England, as part of the company's five-year agreement with the Milk Marketing Board of the United Kingdom to produce sexed and cloned dairy embryos for that country's dairy needs.

Snyder County "Conservation Farmer Of The Year" Saves The Soil

Eberle's Snyder County Farm has been in the family for five generations. Eberle's greatest hope is to pass on the farm to his kids, knowing that the farmland will have as much topsoil as it had when he received it.

In desperation, Eberle called the local conservation office. Although the Eberles had joined the Snyder County Conservation District in 1961, the conservation practices they were following were no longer effective enough to save the land from nature's ravages.

"It's not too late to solve the problem," the district manager assured Eberle. "We can always do something to stop it."

The Soil Conservation Service (SCS) technician used an aerial map of the Eberle farm to draw in the waterways and terraces to stop erosion on the farm.

The Eberles studied the proposed plans with concern. At the top of the hill, five grassy waterways spread out like spokes in a wheel and fed into the main terrace that wrapped around the farm.

The project would require earthmoving equipment. Eberle was concerned that the 2,700-foot-long waterways, 2,015 feet of diversions, and the 1½ -mile terrace would use up valuable acreage.

A skeptical farmer increased Eberle's fears when he warned, "You're going to ruin a good farm."

Eberle hesitated. He heard that warning before.

In 1953, when Eberle took over his grandfather's farm, neighbors had mocked the "city slicker" who they said "learned farming from a book."

Raised in the city, Eberle had little opportunity to see farming firsthand. As often as possible, he spent summertime on his grandfather's farm where he was intrigued with watching things grow.

"Grandpa," he said, "I want to be a farmer."

Eberle's mother noticed her son's determination to farm and sent him to Penn State to study agronomy.

But after one year, Eberle married, and, since he was the only grandchild who expressed an interest in farming, his grandfather turned down offers to sell and gave the farm to his grandson.

At that point, the farm had 160 acres. Right from the beginning, Eberle was determined to apply the agricultural practices that he had studied at Penn State.

But neighboring farmers, who were skeptical of "book learning" and amused that this city slicker needed his farm-girl wife to teach him how to milk a cow, predicted Eberle would ruin a good farm.

Eberle ignored their taunts. To learn all that he could, he poured over books, magazines, and all the agricultural literature that he could find. He also relied upon the county agent's advice whenever he needed help.

Soon the Eberles had the second top herd in the county DHIA, and, by 1966, when they decided to sell their herd and concentrate on crop farming, they were rewarded by the cows "bringing unheard of prices for that time."

Contour farming

In those beginning years of farming, Eberle also realized that he had to stop plowing the ground in the patchwork style that his grandfather and great grandfather had used. With the county agent's help, he laid out the farm in contour strips.

Utilizing the land to the best advantage, the Eberle's practice contour farming on the gently sloping land. On the steep slopes Robert and Betty Eberle have planted 12,000 trees in the past 10 to 12 years.

For a number of years, the contour strips solved the erosion problem and the Eberles concentrated on making their farming practices profitable and on being helpful members of the Snyder County community.

Eberle has been a school board member for 28 years and secretary of the board for 14 years. Both he and his wife are members of St. Paul's Luthern Church council, the Adult Young Farmer Program, and Pennsylvania Farmer's Association.

Mrs. Eberle has done everything there is to do on the farm. She also has put roofs on two of their houses. She helped with Boy Scouts, PTA, 4-H, and church women groups.

Fifteen years ago Eberle began chisel plowing. Eight years ago, he started double cropping by harvesting the winter barley and then sowing soybeans and buckwheat.

That's when erosin problems increased.

He purchased a no-till corn planter with a 6-inch drill to keep rows closer together in order to smother weeds and help in land conservation.

But too often, torrential downpours pounded the hills and valleys.

Long after the sun returned and the soil became tillable, the storm's ravages remained. Whenever Eberle drove equipment over the hilly terrain, gullies and deep ruts were a grim reminder of the storm's damage.

"It was hard on the machinery," Eberle said. "I had to farm around some of the deep gullies and often my machinery would become stuck in the ruts.

"I knew I had to look for help in stopping the erosion," Eberle said. That is when he approached the SCS.

Feared wasted farmland

After the plans were completed, the planners tried to appease Eberle's fears that too much farmland would be wasted. The planners promised that the terrace could be planted and used.

"I had read about terraces and waterways and I had listened to conservationists talk about it, but I was still skeptical," he said.

The diversions intercept the water from the deep slopes and carry it to waterways that are really grass-lined channels.

Before Eberle could actually benefit from the hard work, he had to wait many months. Bulldozers cut in the terraces and waterways.

Straw bales needed to be laid across the terrace to prevent erosion before the grass was established. Furrows and ditches were temporarily plowed around the waterways until the grass was established and then the furrows and ditches needed to be plowed shut. Seeding was done in the spring. Unfortunately the land was seeded during the drought, and although it took several months, amazingly the grass grew.

It took six months before equipment could be driven on the freshly seeded terrace that runs a full one and a half miles around the Eberle farm. During that time, Eberle kept a watchful eye on the project. At times he took a shovel to fix up areas that received some damage from rain.

To his amazement he actually gained acreage instead of losing it because he no longer needed to farm around the ditches. He had feared that the terrace would be wasted grassland, but because it is sowed with a mixture of seed that is made into hay, the terrace serves the twofold purpose of a waterway and as a hay crop.

No ruts

All that hard work and long wait were not in vain. Eberly is estatic when he reports, "Now the land has no ruts cutting it through it. It is so much nicer to farm.

"I couldn't believe how well it worked until I actually saw it for myself. You have to see it to believe it," Eberle said.

To his amazement he actually gained acreage instead of losing it because he no longer needed to farm around the ditches.

He had feared that the terrace would be wasted grassland, but because it is sowed with a mixture of seed that is made into hay, the terrace serves the twofold purpose of a waterway and as a hay crop.

Of the project, Donald Gordon, the SCS technician, said, "It was a fairly difficult job. The fields had an awful lot of erosion. It was quite interesting to watch the Eberles' interest in conservation develop as they implemented a complete plan in stages."

Financial assistance

Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) paid 75 percent of the costs required to complete the Eberle project. Monies from this organization are available to all farmers.

"I don't know why more farmers don't take advantage of these programs that conserve the land," Eberle said.

ASCS spokesperson Mary Kiel said that Washington determines cost sharing with ASCS, but the minimum amount is 50 percent and the maximum is 75 percent of the cost. The ASCS cannot pay more than $3,500 annually to one farmer.

Each county determines how much the conservation practice will save the soil. High-priority practices of saving the soil and the terrain through diversions and waterways save a lot of soil, and, for that reason receive a higher percentage of payment.

The SCS specified the amount and type of seed to be used on the terraces and waterways, but they give several options from which farmers can choose.

For example, Eberle seeds his terrace with a mixture of 64-pounds spring oats, 90 pounds winter wheat, or 56 pounds rye. The waterway mix includes 60 pounds fescue, 35 red fescue, or 25 pounds Kentucky bluegrass, 3 pounds red top or perennial, and 50 pounds rye grass.

For the farmer seeking conservation help, there are two things to remember, according to Craig Bingman, district manager for the Snyder County SCS: "The SCS provides free technical advice and the ASCS provides the financial assistance."

According to Mary Kiel, executive director of ASCS, financial conservation assistance is also available through the Chesapeake Bay Project and loans from the soil conservation Farm and Home Administration fund.

"These different organizations often work with each other to assist farmers," Gordon said. "We have one thing in common — that is saving the soil."

Tree conservation

Another conservation method that the Eberles have used for the last 12 to 15 years is tree planting.

"We have been planting trees to preserve the heavily sloped hillsides and lumber," Mrs. Eberle said.

The Eberles estimate that they have planted about 12,000 pine trees and a mixture of locust, crab, and apple trees.

Adept at planting the two-year-old seedlings, the couple has planted as many as 160 pine trees in one day. Last year they planted 2,000 trees during the season.

"He digs the hole with a tree planter and I put it in and stomp the ground," Mrs. Eberle said of their teamwork.

In cooperation with the game commission, the Eberles receive seedlings to plant in exchange for allowing hunters to use their property.

This is another conservation method that the Eberles would like to see more farmers use.

Preserving the land by buying

To make their operation more profitable for the big machinery they use, the Eberles needed more acreage for their strictly grain operation. Crops include corn, soybeans, barley, wheat, oats, and a double crop of buckwheat.

In 1960, the Eberles purchased a second farm. In 1971, they bought a third one, and in 1990, they added another one to bring a total of 500 acres to their operation.

Their son, John, who farms with his dad, raises 500 calves annually. They see buying land as conserving it for farming.

"We don't have an ag security area here," Eberle said. "Buying the land keeps people from complaining about the noise and odor on the farm."

Since the Eberles are interested in the land and not additional buildings, they often finance their land purchases by selling off the buildings with several surrounding acres on the newly purchased plot.

Conservation award

On March 29, 1990, the Eberles received the "Conservation Farmer of the Year" award from the Snyder County Conservation District.

For the farmer seeking conservation help, there are two things to remember: "The SCS provides free technical advice and the ASCS provides the financial assistance."

For the Eberles, the rewards of installing the conservation practices are not in awards but in the pleasure of working the soil and seeing the difference.

But the satisfaction doesn't stop there. After watching Eberle's success with conservation farming, a former skeptical neighbor is beginning to incorporate some of the same conservation practices.

"You're running a good farm," he gruffly conceded to Eberle.

Eberle smiled.

ADADC Plans June Dairy Promotion Blitz

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — June is Dairy Month and the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council Inc. has announced a number of plans to promote the consumption of dairy products.

Advertising strategies targeted for television, dairy cases and store windows, newspapers and even a baseball game promotion are part of the planned line-up for this year's dairy month, according to an agency newletter.

"Retailers are already being contacted by ADADC staff to get them involved in this year's June Dairy Month sales promotion," the newletter reported. "The sales promotion is being supported with network television advertising featuring the theme "Get Mooovin' With Milk."

Supermarkets set to carry promotions include Giant, Acme, Insalaco's and IGA Food Marts.

Food sections of newspapers which feature recipes and article and photographs highlighting dairy products are on tap.

In conjunction with the Scraton Red Barons baseball team, ADADC is sponsoring Dairy Night at Lackawanna County Stadium on June 8.

As part of the baseball night, milk batting helmets will be given out to the first 4,000 children coming through the gates. A cow-milking contest, featuring local radio people and team members is also scheduled.

Dairy producers can get a discount to the game also and receive reduced-price admission. For more information, call the Williamsport office at (717) 323-2552.

ACME'S KOOL-CEL EVAPORATIVE COOLING PAD SYSTEM

Kool-Cel Pads

Kool-Cel pads are cellulose cooling cells 4" and 6" deep, 12" wide and available in 12" increments from 24" to 72" tall with two pieces of 4" combined to make 84" and 96" tall pads. The cooling cells are made from a specially formulated cellulose paper impregnated with insoluble antirot salts. It is designed with an exclusive cross-fluted configuration which induces highly turbulent mixing inside the pad between the water and the air, and contributes to the evaporative efficiency. The cross-fluted design makes Kool-Cel a strong self-supporting pad with high evaporative efficiency and low pressure drop (resistance to air flow).

A face velocity of 250 feet per minute for 4" an 400 feet per minute for 6" is recommended for the most economical cost and operation of the Kool-Cel system.

County Looks At Ways To Acquire, Develop Parks

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Many people agree there is a severe shortage of open parks and spaces in Lancaster County. But what has the county done about it?

A task force, appointed by the Lancaster County Commissioners last July, announced its findings at a news conference Monday. The task force report details how parks and open spaces can be obtained.

The report outlines the spending of $27 million to "acquire and develop parks and to preserve open space and farmland," according to a release prepared by the Lancaster County Commissioners Office.

To obtain the money needed to acquire and develop land for parks, the task force has recommended a bond issue "of no less than $21 million to finance additions and improvements to the system of parks and open spaces in Lancaster County," according to the report synposis.

The following proposals were made:

- $6.75 million for the acquisition of 1,350 acres for county parks, at an average cost of $5,000 per acre.
- $6 million for the Municipal Matching Grants Program.
- $3 million for the development of a regional county park and additional linear parks.
- $2 million for continued development of Chickies Rock County Park.
- $3 million for a county farmland easement acquisition program.
- $250,000 for inflation, contingencies, and expenses.

"We believe there is a severe shortage of open parks and spaces in Lancaster County," said Kathleen A. Gray, chair of the funding task force.

The report calls for county municipalities to more than double existing park and open space acreage by the year 2010. It asserts that municipalities should spend not less than $6 million to acquire and develop 2,700 acres for recreational use.

So far, no specific sites have been selected for the additional development, awaiting the publishing of the task force "master plan," according to Gray.

To raise the money, equivalent to $1.00 a month for each household in the county during the next 20 years, or .5 mil of tax, the county commissioners are awaiting the response and reaction from the citizens of the county, according to R. H. Brenneman, county commissioner.

"The county needs to take the leadership role with respect to parks and open spaces," said Gray.

Little Livestock Expo Honors Smeal

JUDY PATTON
Centre Co. Correspondent

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The grand champion showman of the Penn State Little International Livestock Exposition held April 14 was John Eaton. A native of Windsor in York County, Eaton won the top spot of the Expo showing a Dorset ewe.

The 73rd Little International, put on by the Block and Bridle Club at the Ag Arena, featured showing and fitting competition in beef, sheep, swine, and horse divisions. Shawn Kauffman, State College, was the show manager, assisted by Barry Sands of Montrose. Dr. Harold Harpster is the club advisor.

This year's show was dedicated to Jerry Smeal, who has been a meat processor at the Penn State Meats Lab for 22 years. In addition to instructing labs in livestock slaughtering and meat cutting, Smeal has prepared special cuts for the Meats Judging Team and has assisted with the annual Block and Bridle sausage sale.

Judy Zerby of Knoxville was the reserve champion showman, and was champion showman and reserve champion fitter in the swine competition with her Yorkshire pig.

Judges for each division were Beef - Ruth Ann Peters, a Centre County Charolais beef cattle merchandiser; Horse - Daria Pelick, Bellefonte, vice president of Queens Three Farms, a Quarter Horse operation, and Nittany Valley Feed and Hardware; Sheep - Dirk Wise, Spring Mills, manager of the Penn State Poultry Research Farm and former assistant shepherd of the sheep flock; and Swine - Scott Davenport, Montrose, a swine specialist for Agway, Inc.

Special awards presented at the evening banquet included the Grant Sherritt Award for outstanding senior, which went to Karen Rabenold. An animal production major from Kutztown, Berks County, Karen has been assistant beef superintendent for 2 Little Internationals, editor of the Little I catalog, and a member of the reserve champion quiz bowl team in the National Cattlemen's Association contest.

For being the outstanding junior, Dave Lloyd of Gibsonia received the Glenn R. Kean Award. Dave works at the Penn State beef barns and was champion beef showman in the 1990 Little I. The award is for the most hardworking junior in the Block and Bridle Club. Randy Swope, Luthersburg, won the James L. Watkins Rookie Award for the most hardworking new member.

The 1990 Distinguished Alumnus is Peter Krall from Catasauqua. A 1956 animal husbandry graduate, Krall is now general manager of Willow Brook Company, a 1300-acre quarter horse farm. He is the founder and past president of the Pennsylvania Stockman's Club and a 30-year founding member of the Pennsylvania Livestock Association. He has supported the Penn State Livestock Judging Team and helped with the Little International for several years.

Honorary membership was presented to Donald and Kenneth Narber, who own and operate the Narber Brothers Agway in State College. Since 1983, they have loaned the Block and Bridle Club landscape materials to decorate the Ag Arena for the Little International and other club events.

Winners of the spring judging contest held March 24 were also recognized. Participants totalled 254, including 61 in the youth advanced division, 174 in the youth beginners (a total of 235 4-H and FFA contestants), and 19 collegiates.

The high advanced team in the youth division was York County 4-H, and team member Cathy Shive was the high advanced judge. In the collegiate division Lori Cash, Centre Hall, was the high amateur judge, while Jeremy Cattau, Clune, was the high professional judge.

Dairy Expo Draws Winners

JUDY PATTON

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — While other Penn Staters frolicked at the Blue and White football game, the Beta Sigma Beta Regatta, and Earth Day celebrations, Penn State Dairy Expo competitors were vying for trophies at the Ag Arena on April 21.

Tom McCauley, a freshman from Elizabethtown, came out on top as All-Around Champion of the 65th Dairy Expo. Close at his heels was sophomore Tom Wiker, a fellow Lancaster Countian from Holtwood, the Reserve All-Around Champion.

Dr. Lester Griel Jr. was this year's Expo dedicatee. A Lancaster County native, Griel is a Penn State dairy science alumni and has been a veterinarian at Penn State since 1965 and a faculty member since 1979. His duties include teaching courses in animal diseases and dairy herd health programs and being responsible for the herd health programs of all University livestock.

Overall chairman for the Expo was Ernie Buhl, Waterford, while the show manager was Ben Dum, Elliotsburg, assisted by Scott Snyder, Volant. Dr. Larry Muller and Dale Olver are the club advisors.

Patty McMurray, the first female All-Around Dairy Expo Champion in 1970, was this year's fitting judge. Patty is responsible for raising calves, fitting and showing, bookkeeping, and advertising at Twin Brooks Farm in Washington County.

Judging showmanship was John Howard, a former Outstanding Senior in Dairy Science at Penn State. He was named the 1990 Outstanding Young Holstein Breeder by the Pennsylvania Holstein Association for his Lancaster County registered Holstein herd with a 23,400-pound average.

Special events midway through the contest provided fun for all. The Alumni Showmanship Contest had former exhibitors of all ages parading cows they had drawn 15 minutes before the contest began in front of Judge Rich Lorenzo. Lorenzo is a Penn State dairy production graduate and is now the head wrestling coach at the University. Winner of the contest was Lolly-Lesher, president of the Penn State Dairymen's Club.

Other events were the Celebrity Milking Contest, in which pairs of contestants hand-milked a cow into a cup; a milk chugging contest, where each of four team members had to drink a quart of milk as fast as possible; and a calf dressing contest with teams racing against time to put attire on a tackled calf.

Championship placings in the Showing and Fitting Contest were as follows:

Overall Champion Showman - Tom McCauley, Elizabethtown

Dairy Expo awards banquet

At the awards banquet at the Hetzel Union Building in the evening, the Dairy Science Club honored Dr. Earl Kesler as Distinguished Alumnus. Besides earning his graduate degrees at Penn State, Kesler was a member of the Penn State faculty from 1948 to 1984, retiring as professor emeritus. He taught several dairy production courses, particularly lactation physiology, and was a graduate student advisor. Kesler also did extensive research in dairy nutrition, focusing on forages and calf nutrition.

The Outstanding Young Dairyman was Phil Taylor, a Penn State multi-county dairy extension agent in Centre and Clinton counties. An Erie County native, Taylor was Outstanding Senior in Dairy Science at Penn State in 1984 and was president of the Northeast student affiliate of the American Dairy Science Association, among several other activities. His main responsibilities now are to provide information to dairymen and industry people on dairy management.

The 1990 Outstanding Senior in Dairy Production was Ross Hershberger of Martinsburg, from a registered Holstein farm, which he plans to take over. In addition to his many activities both in the College of Agriculture and the Penn State concert choir and chamber singers, he has received many awards and scholarships and has been inducted into several honorary societies. The faculty also nominated him for a Dairy Shrine Award.

Mike Eckert, New Albany, won the August Branding Award for the outstanding junior who shows the most commitment to helping other people. The Dairy Cattle Judging Team gave its Service Award to Alan Bair of Lancaster for his many years of coaching 4-H dairy judging teams. Bair is the current president of the Penn State College of Agriculture Alumni Association.

Dr. William Heald, interim head of the animal and dairy science department, announced the nominees for American Dairy Science Association scholarships. The sophomore Bronze Award went to Rob Davis, Cochranville and Rob Mowry, Roaring Springs. Rob Barley, Creswell, was nominated for the junior Silver Award, and Ross Hershberger for the senior Gold Award.

Other awards presented at the banquet included the Pennsylvania Holstein Association Award to the chairman of the Nittany Fall Classic Sale, presented to Dave Mattocks, Tunkhannock; the Robert Rumler Award to the Dairy Expo show manager Ben Dum, Elliotsburg; the Dairy Princess Award to Angie Bollinger, Newmanstown; and the Dairy Judging Contest Awards for the competition held on March 24.

Champion Holstein showman was Tom McCauley, right, who also picked up reserve champion Holstein fitter. Champion Holstein fitter was Will Phipps.

Dairymen's Club Decides On Award

JUDY PATTON
Centre Co. Correspondent

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Penn State dairy alumni and friends gathered on April 20 at the Holiday Inn in State College for the 13th annual meeting of the Penn State Dairymen's Club.

A charity auction highlighted the evening. Auctioneers Jeff Harding of the Pennsylvania Holstein Association and Phil Taylor of Penn State Extension were able to raise $2,000 on donated items from club members. The money will go to the Penn State Dairy Cattle Judging Team for expenses and for the team's endowment fund.

Club President Lolly Lesher announced that the 1990 Warren R. Poage Grant-In-Aid recipient is Dave Wentz of Lebanon County. The grant is administered by a club committee and goes to a promising freshman majoring in dairy production at Penn State.

Starting next year, the 208-member club will present a service award to a member who has contributed the most to the Pennsylvania dairy industry and educational programs. The club's purpose is to encourage the development of strong realistic programs in instruction, research, and extension in the dairy production field.

To update meeting attendants on Penn State dairy activities, Dairy Science Club President Mary Ann Keith gave an overview of club activities for the year and awards to be presented at the 1990 Dairy Exposition the next day. She introduced Expo dedicatee Dr. Lester Griel, Distinguished Alumnus Dr. Earl Kesler, and Young Dairyman Phil Taylor.

Penn State Dairy Judging Team coach Dale Olver gave a report on the team's results from the contests they participated in this year. He emphasized the team's steady improvement in scores, culminating with Ross Hershberger's having the high individual score at the Eastern States Exposition.

Dr. William Heald, interim head of the animal and dairy science department, described the large agricultural science building under construction on campus, which may be ready by next fall. He reported also that new facilities will be built at the Penn State dairy barns and that three faculty positions will be filled. The search for a permanent department head to replace him is still under way.

Graduating dairy science seniors introduced at the club meeting were Dave Mattocks, Ernie Buhl, Cathy Baxter, Dwayne Hay, Joanne Kelshaw, and Sharon Heefner.

The next meeting of the Dairymen's Club will be held next fall at the time of the Nittany Lion Fall Classic Sale.

Leslie Rhoades, left, stands by the stained glass piece she made and donated to the Dairymen's Club auction. Standing next to her is Lolly Lesher, club president.

State Grangers Meet

recently was an old folks home and a couple of pharmacies."

She said rural growth of these types of businesses is an indication that rural areas are increasingly centers for elderly populations. The businesses also put an increasing demand for better health care facilities and physicians.

"But if you look at how many doctors there are in the rural areas versus the urban areas, you'll find out the ratio of physicians to population is only a third in rural areas as compared to urban areas," she said. "Even now we're at a shortage of doctors in some rural towns."

She said that many of these rural doctors are also nearing retirement age. Statewide, about a fourth of the general practitioners, who are the cornerstone of rural health care, are about retirement age. "Once they retire, who is going to take their places?" she asked.

"If you look at medical school today, you'll find that the kids going through now have much more tendency to (specialize)," she said. The attraction for being a country doctor is down, she said.

Medicare and Medicaid Inequities Hurt

Medicare and Medicaid payment inequities add to the decreased interest to practice medicine in rural areas, Gruss said.

"Medicare and Medicaid pay doctors differently for the same services in rural and urban areas," she said. "If you are in an urban area, depending on the case, you get between 20 and 50 percent more for a case than you do in rural areas."

She said the medical insurance payment imbalance is also confounded by higher transportation costs.

Federal Incentives Killed

Another change, on a federal level, is turning potential rural general practitioners away from Pennsylvania.

'Even now we're at a shortage of doctors in some rural towns.'

Gruss said the National Health Scholarship program historically offered school loan forgiveness incentives for rural doctors. It has been the only way in which many, very small, remote communities have been able to have the services of a physician.

Now, in Pennsylvania, that benefit to the doctor is gone.

"One health center in Greene County . . . had two of these National Health Scholarship doctors there. They were there because they would have some of their loans paid for, if they stayed there," she said.

One of the doctors left and the when the town conducted an in-depth, wide-reaching search for a replacement, they came up empty. "They were not able to come up with even one person who wanted to even think about looking into an opportunity there, in their small clinic," she said.

"That community was lucky though, because the national program then added their (the community's) name to list of those eligible to participate in that progam. And all of a sudden they had all of these candidates interested in going there, because, if they went there, they have their loans paid off," Gruss said.

"But what has happened is, the federal government has cut off that program," she said. "It no longer exists, there are a couple of people still in the program, but once it's over, there are no new doctors for it."

She said the federal government has started a new program to replace the old one, that calls for some federal funding, but requires state funds also.

"The program is basically the same idea . . . but while a number of states are participating in it, Pennsylvania has not been a part of that (new) program," she said.

As a result, the Center has been attempting to push legislators and adminstration to allocate funds for participation in this program, Gruss said.

She added that, last month, legislation was introduced that would accomplish this goal. However, because the bill would seek to spend state money, its chances of approval, especially in a gubernatorial election year, is far from certain.

Lack of incentives for rural medicine are further-reaching.

"There are some distrubing trends going on," Gruss said. "During the 1980s, across the nation, 200 rural hospitals closed. Tnat means that, in the last decade, eight percent of all rural hospitals closed. Forty-three have closed in 1988 alone.

"In Pennsylvania, two rural hospitals have closed so far. But, what you find out is, there are a lot of hospitals saying 'We're just barely hanging on. We're about to close,'" Gruss said.

She said the reason for these pending closures is twofold: high-tech services in larger rural hospitals can't attract the patients nor the cash flow to maintain staying open; rural incomes have also dropped and uncompensated care in rural areas has increased.

She said that the Medicare and Medicaid policies, however, seem to have the largest impact on whether a rural hospital can stay in business.

She said a director at a Lock Haven hospital recently told her that if his hospital were moved nine miles it would be reclassified and have received $600,000 more last year doing the same thing. She said that amount of money for a small operation can make the difference.

The center can't change the federal Medicare policy, she said, but can make recommendations to the state and has done so, asking the state to change its Medicaid payment standards to something more equitable.

Farm Bill Expectations

Leroy Watson, National Grange lobbyist in Washington, D.C., said he expects passage of the 1990 Farm Bill to be conducted within four months because "it's an election year and they (representatives and senators) will want to go home with something."

Watson has been a Grange lobbyist for five years and came on just in time to work with the 1985 Farm Bill. Times are a lot quieter in comparison, but special interest pressure could be even more diversified and intense, he said.

According to Watson, since the first farm bill was passed in 1949, and even prior to that, when federal farm policy was being created, it has traditionally been farmers and agricultural-interest representatives who have directed policy.

That has changed and is changing the face of demands associated with creating a politically feasible farm bill.

"There are more people interested now. Twenty years ago it was only farmers, but now there are environmental groups, energy concerns, people from health and safety organizations, consumer protection advocates and some seeking aid for the poor, homeless and indigent," Watson said.

"Some people are upset with the expanded interest, but as long as we're going to have public policy for farming, other interests are going to have to be allowed to have their say," he said, "just as farmers get a chance to voice their opinion on public issues affecting other aspects of society."

But all the widening spectrum of public interest in farm policy shouldn't discourage farmers from having their say, Watson said, adding that farm policy isn't going to be dictated by Army generals, energy officials and others.

'. . . as long as we're going to have public policy for farming, other interests are going to have to be allowed to have their say.'

He said that farmers have to understand their changing role in society. He said projections are that for the 1990s, one farm is going to have to supply enough food, cloth and fiber for 120 other people. He said there are also aspects of the total farm policy that may not be easily understood by one special interest farming group.

Hypothetically, he said that it's possible that some policy sought by the dairy industry could be detrimental to peanut farmers, or other areas of production agriculture.

Farm bill policy must reflect all programs and be for the overall benefit of the future of agriculture and the people of the United States, he explained.

Furthermore, he said that only half the farmers in the U.S. are going to be affected by the Farm Bill directly.

However, for Pennsylvania, strong in dairy production, he said the dairy policy apparently looks like it will consist of increasing the range of alternatives to the secretary of the U.S. Department of Agriculture in determining how to support milk prices.

Watson said he qualified all predictions with the understanding that not of it may happen.

Also, he predicted that the base support price will go from its current $10.10 to $10.60.

He said the ag secretary will be given three different ways to adjust the price of milk and that marketing will set the stage for most of the decisions.

Depending on what component of milk goes into surplus, butterfat can be expected to stay as the major watchdog of overall milk surplus, even though it hasn't been a true indicator in the past year because of butter surpluses and milk shortages.

According to Watson, when surplus butter accrues to between 3.5 and 5 billion pounds, the secretary can adjust the support price of milk to discourage overall production.

However, when butter surpluses go greater than 5 billion pounds, then component pricing can be used and take into account demand for non-fat dry milk and avoid the cut in support price. He said that unless both butterfat and nonfat dry milk reach a 5 billion pound surplus, the milk support price can't be cut.

Or, the secretary of ag can institute a two-tier pricing system based on a percentage of historical production.

If surplus exceeds 5 billion pounds for both nonfat and butterfat, then the secretary can institute an assessment on butterfat production.

If surplus butterfat exceeds 7 billion pounds, the two-tiered system must be implemented. The two-tiered system would pay full support for about 75-percent of a farm's established production and a reduced price for all extra, thus curtailing increased production.

Another change is in the grain target price and loan system. He said members of the House of Representatives would freeze the target price and possibly increase it based on the price of production.

But to prevent some large operations from making big money on the deal, the increased target price and loan would only be attributable to each producer's 40,000 bushels of corn and 27,500 bushels of wheat.

He said the complaints have been that the benefits from this program have been going to the largest and wealthiest producers and not to the family farmer, for whom the program was designed. This provision is ostensibly to prevent abuses.

Watson said other problems with the loan and target price program have been that farmers were losing crops and the government was losing money and ending up with surplus crop.

This has happened since the crop is the collateral for the loan and the only recourse the government has is to claim the crop from a defaulted loan.

He said there will be some expected changes with oats and barley also, because they've historically been addressed only as a feed crop and in recent years the trade of these grains has changed dramatically from animal to human consumption.

Anti-swampbusting provisions already exist in USDA programs. However, according to Watson, the definition of a swamp has never been made clear, until now.

Watson said the definition of a swamp is if a piece of land "has a soil type that indicates a swamp, plant life that indicates a swamp and water, then it is a swamp."

But Watson said the definition also includes a provision that if any one of the three elements is found, then it can be assumed that the other two already exist. He said that this provision changes the Grange's position away from support of anti-swampbusting regulations.

"We originally thought that swampbusting would affect about two to three million acres of agricultural land nation wide . . . we're looking at, probably at a minimum, 50 to 60 million acres. That's more than what is in the conservation reserve program. More than two times what's in the program."

He said that the new regulations will especially affect farm land that has been in agriculture for generations.

'We originally thought that swampbusting would affect about two to three million acres of agricultural land nation wide . . . we're looking at, probably at a minimum, 50 to 60 million acres.'

GATT and the Farm Bill

The Grange's position is also that the possible outcome of the current Uraguay round of General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) talks should not be considered in forming the 1990 Farm Bill, Watson said.

The GATT is a largely unenforceable agreement among member nations as to how they will conduct the exporting and importing each others goods, of which agricultural products are but a portion.

There are 97 member-nations represented at the talks and, according to Watson, the USDA has "put all of our ag programs on the table" in an attempt to open up free trade.

If other nations agree to eliminating similar programs, it could possibly mean an end to portions of U.S. support price programs.

However, Watson said the Grange is seeking a farm bill "that reflects domestic needs."

He said that in the event the GATT is settled and calls for changes in U.S. farm policy, then the programs can be changed later.

Agricultural Commodities Trading

In other business, not related to the farm bill, Watson warned of changes to agricultural commodities and futures trading being called for by those Watson refers to as "Wall Street banker types."

Agricultural commodities and futures trading in the United States is controlled and regulated by the Commodities Futures Trading Commission. Watson said those who run Wall Street trading, which deals with stocks and other forms of money, are attempting to merge the boards which control the trading.

According to Watson, this could have disasterous results if it were to go occur, since Wall Street is not sensitive to agriculture.

The CFTC also has a President-appointed, five-member agricultural advisory committee which helps regulate trade of commodities. Self-regulatory body that National Futures Association, NFA. Watson said traditionally, whomever is President, usually has ensured that at least one of the committeemen is an active farmer.

"If they merged, or even some of it was merged, we're afraid agricultural concerns are going to get lost," Watson said.

"They (Wall Street traders) are in a recession. There are a lot of problems on Wall Street." Watson said the message all Grangers should be sending to Washington is, "Keep their hands off the Commodities Futures Trading Commission."

were in the fields with tillage equipment to compare energy and power requirements among a chisel plow, a moleboard plow and a disk harrow.

"Fifty percent of our students come from non-farm background," Buffington said. "so we can't take a lot for granted in the basic knowledge of our new students. But upon graduation the students have a good hands-on background in functional machinery design, good engineering in both production agriculture and food processing and soil and conservation as related to the environment.

"I am convinced we will see the use of more fuels that eliminate visible emissions," Buffington said. "Diesel fuel with a percentage of sunflower seed oil may be one possibility."

Some of the research in the department involves the improvement of grain harvesting equipment. Present combines are 90 percent efficient. But an improvement of five percent would be a great economic benefit to farmers.

This improvement will likely come from electronic and computer additions that continuously sense grain moisture and make adjustments for optimum threshing efficiency while on the move in the field. Soil fertility sensors and pesticide/herbicide applicators may make the same kind of on-the-move computations in the future.

To apply fertilizer only at the right spot in the right amount on the the field could be environmentally quite acceptable. In addition, to apply pesticides or herbisides in split second applications as the machine senses each plant, could save up to 85 percent of the farmer's spray materials cost. Buffington thinks these equipment capabilites could be available on commercial machines within five years.

Other projects Buffington showed the ag council members included:

—A lighting system research project for the space program. The need to grow food on a future space trip to Mars will require that units evenly distribute light to food growing beds. Research already shows that identical lighting unit models can have 30 percent different illuminating capacities.

—Split tillage reaearch shows this method of cultivation can hold rain water on the fields better than any other present method of plowing now used. Research continues on a Lancaster County farm.

—Research in the water supply and waste management for the food processing industry is quite useful to evaluate environmental and food safety concerns.

Dr. Dennis Buffington shows ag advisory council members PSU's ag engineering facilities.

—Studies in soil leaching, irrigation, field drainage and rain measurement provides valuable information for soil conservation.

"Our degree programs prepare students for their work in industry," Buffington said. "Our well-equipped research facilty helps students to get a feel for what kinds of equipment is used in ag related industry."

Retired Cooperative Worker Helping Polish Farmers

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — For more than 40 years, Francis Chesnick of Uniondale, PA, dedicated his professional life to serving the dairy farmer members of Dairylea Cooperative Inc. Now, recently retired, Chesnick is dedicating his personal time to helping dairy/beef farmers in Poland develop a cooperative of their own.

More than 100 million members of cooperatives in Eastern Europe and the USSR have asked the U.S. cooperatives to help them return to a free market economy, according to the National Cooperative Business Association.

In response to this call, the Volunteers in Overseas Cooperative Assistance program searched for people with a great deal of cooperative experience and a willingness to spend six weeks in the Polish town of Ilawa. Ilawa is located 100 miles north of Warsaw.

Chesnick, the son of Polish immigrants, fits the bill.

"I'm looking forward to this venture — the whole idea is to help people make a better life," said Chesnick prior to leaving for Poland on March 29. "This is an opportunity to further enhance the freedoms for which many of us went to war to protect." Chesnick served in the U.S. Army from 1943 to 1946.

"Right now the farmers in Poland sell their milk to a highly bureaucratic and totally inefficient national organization. They have no say as to how much they will receive for their milk," said Chesnick.

The farmers Chesnick will be working with are considered, by Polish standards, modern. Most operate 20-cow dairies on 40 acres of land. They have an average production of 7,000 pounds of milk per cow per year.

Chesnick was raised on a dairy farm in Uniondale, Pa, graduated from Penn State University with a degree in agricultural economics, and joined Dairylea in 1942 working directly with the farmers in a variety of positions. He retired as a special membership representative.

Chesnick and his wife June, residents of Utica, NY, have three daughters and three grandchildren.

receiving $345,666.71 that it, indeed, does not receive. Those monies go back to run county fairs, give individual premiums, and help not only FFA'ers but also 4-Hers.

The issue concerning the deletion of the $33,000 line item is the fact that a majority of that money was used as support money for statewide FFA programs, not for the Foundation's own expenses.

The Pennsylvania FFA budget for running its statewide program will be in excess of $167,000 this year. Not only that, the Pennsylvania FFA Association has to pay the salary of an Executive Secretary to run the FFA statewide programs -- something that the state department of education used to pay for! So our FFA'ers, part of a public educational curriculum, are having to pay out of their own pockets for educational leadership.

Has agriculture fallen so low on the agenda that the importance of leaders in agriculture tomorrow is not worth $33,000? That is a drop in the bucket compared to other line items being kept in. I believe it worth much more than $33,000... in fact, $33,000 is a cheap price to pay for a skilled, educational group of 7,500 Pennsylvania FFA'ers!

Agriculture! America's and Pennsylvania's largest industry. Many factors have contributed to the success of American agriculture. Not the least of these are the agricultural education and FFA programs conducted by local school districts.

However, in recent years, high school agriculture programs have met with many difficulties. The state has cut the number of essential personnel employed by the Department of Education. These personnel whose positions have been cut had the responsibility to act as liason between teachers of agriculture, school administrators, and the Department of Agriculture. Activities and programs have been forced to be curtailed by this attrition of manpower.

Now, once again, Governor Casey has cut funding from the 1990-1991 budget which had been directed to enrich programs for high school students studying agriculture. The time has come when, if successful high school agricultural education programs are to continue, these funding cuts must stop. Instead, additional funding needs to be allotted to increase the number of area consultants and other Department of Education personnel whose duty it is to help the local school districts maintain and improve existing programs.

It is essential to the economy of Pennsylvania that we keep the agriculture industry as an important economic resource. One way this can be accomplished is to continue to teach and train the new generation of agriculture employees and leaders. If Governor Casey would examine the statistics, he would find that the estimated number of students needed to fill agricultural positions is much larger than the number of students being trained. In just a couple of years, there will be a 17% shortage of college graduates in agriculture in the United States. Penn State's College of Agriculture must recruit students in order to fill classes. High school agriculture programs will train the majority of these future workers.

It is my hope that the agriculture community in Pennsylvania will unite and encourage the Governor to reinstate the funding and increase personnel in agricultural education. The entire state economy will suffer and it will be much more costly in the future if our great industry of agriculture cannot function because there is no one trained to produce the food and fiber Americans require.

Secretary Boyd Wolff's letter has prompted me to write again to restate feelings concerning several matters concerning vocational education and the Pennsylvania FFA.

Number one, we are asking for Secretary Wolff's, Secretary Carroll's, and our legislators' help in very critical issues for Pennsylvania agricultural education programs.

The first issue is the removal of the line item of $33,000 from the Pennsylvania FFA Foundation. That line item, for which I, along with Larry Redding, of the DOE, wrote the itemized expenditures, contained almost $22,000 in direct program support including regional dairy shows, partial support for national and regional trips, Mid-Winter Convention, help for our Executive Secretary of the FFA Association and publication of the statewide newspaper, FFA Today. Another $3,783 was spent on the public relations travel expense during the year promoting the Pennsylvania FFA. My salary in that line item, $7,500, was matched dollar for dollar by outside private seed money, including a $5,000 contribution by Hatfield Packing Company.

With the exception of the $12,000 to the Pennsylvania FFA Association from Fair Fund Monies, none of the other monies listed in Secretary Wolff's letter, go to the Pennsylvania FFA Association in any way. They go directly back to the county fairs, county FFA organizations, and FFA'ers and 4-H'ers. The real issue on this item is that we believe that asking $33,000 to support the Pennsylvania FFA is not too much to ask for an organization of over 7500 vocational agriculture students.

The second issue, the lack of staffing in the Department of Education in Harrisburg, is a very, very critical issue. Over the last 30 years, the erosion of help for our vocational teachers from the department of education has been drastic. With the updating and change in agriculture subject matter and expansion of new subject fields, what was needed was more on-site help, not less.

Other states around us have met that need. In getting our background material to show this fact from other states, one supervisor of ag education said, "Pennsylvania, twenty five years ago, was the leader in agricultural education. We look at you now and can't believe what has happened." (Please refer to the two charts enclosed to see what has happened in staffing and how we compare to other states. Note that three of these states have much lower FFA membership than Pennsylvania.)

Also, I would like to state that it is imperative to change the way vocational agriculture students are counted. We may not count students enrolled in one period classes as vo-ag students, and we may not count 7 & 8th grade students as Vo-ag students. Ohio and Virginia do.

We must have full-time specialists in agriculture education and FFA if we are to restore Pennsylvania to its rightful place in being a leader and innovator in agricultural education NOW.... or there won't be an agricultural future for tomorrow.

It is time for our leaders in government to lead. We have stressed the issues. Now let's address them together!

I am writing concerning the recent elimination of funds for the Pennsylvania F.F.A. from the Governor's 1990-91 Budget Proposal. Mr. Casey has cut $33,000 from the budget that is earmarked for F.F.A. functions across the state for both rural and urban students.

Agriculture is the number one industry in Pennsylvania, and has 20% of the jobs in farming and related industries. Last year Pennsylvania agriculture grossed over 35 billion dollars. Now, the Governor wants to cut funding for agricultural students who will be tomorrow's workers and leaders. How can we who are interested, who are working in agriculture, who have students enrolled in agricultural programs across the state, who have graduated from these programs and are using the skills that were taught---how can we sit back and allow the Casey Administration to cut the F.F.A. funding from the budget?

Agriculture education needs more funding--not less. When I began teaching agriculture there were two full-time positions coordinating activities of Agriculture Education and the F.F.A. in the Pennsylvania Department of Education. Now there is only one person with only 50% of his time devoted to agriculture education. There were also 16 persons working out of the Department of Education as agricultural coordinators, assisting the schools with agriculture education and the activities of the F.F.A. Now there are only 4 coordinators. These dedicated people, and many others, helped build agriculture into the number one industry in Pennsylvania.

The National Research Council in "Understanding Agriculture--New Directors for Education" has stated that "Most Americans know very little about agriculture, its social and economic significance in the United States, and particularly, its links to human health and environmental quality." Furthermore, it states, "Few systematic educational efforts are made to teach or otherwise develop agricultural literacy in students of any age. Although children are taught something about agriculture, the material tends to be fragmented, frequently outdated, usually only farm oriented, and often negative or condescending in tone."

Only in agriculture education classes can our students learn the importance of production agriculture, agricultural mechanics, forestry, horticulture, national resources agricultural processing, marketing, agricultural supplies and many other topics where the students have hands-on experiences almost daily. Not only do they learn the factual information but many are placed in the work place to gain actual on-the-job experience. All these educational activities make the student ready for the labor market, for advanced schooling, or to become involved in private enterprises.

Yes, today we need to have monies reinstated in the 1990-91 State Budget, at least to the current level, and in the future we must work to have the many positions that have been cut from the Department of Education staff dealing with agriculture reinstated. The position of State Supervisor of Agriculture Education must also be elevated to a 100% position, which has currently been cut to 50%.

I urge all persons to make their feelings known to the Governor and to their Senators and Representatives. Let's make this a bipartisan effort to keep Agriculture number one in Pennsylvania.

I am writing concerning the recent Casey cutbacks suggested for this year's budget. As a new teacher of Agricultural Science in the Western part of the State, I view this proposed budget cut as fiscal mismanagement. In Armstrong County the number one industry is agriculture. The largest employer in the County is an agriculture enterprise, yet we have only one school that includes agriculture in its curriculum. Agricultural Education should be receiving more support from the Department of Agriculture and the Department of Education instead of less. We are an agriculturally illiterate state, yet we have no one in the Western Regional Office of the Department of Education with any Agriculture background.

FFA and Agricultural Education should not have to justify their value. As the best-fed Nation, we take for granted the benefit of bountiful harvests, when in fact this increased production would not be possible without young people willing to invest themselves in Agriculture.

I frequently hear from various Universities the cry for more students with some background in Agriculture, yet we cut funds from programs that encourage participation in formative years.

Our VSO and FFA Activities Coordinator and Vocational Ag Ed Advisor is reduced to 50% agricultural education with only 5% to be spent on FFA.

As a teacher at a Vocational-Technical school, I view the cutback of support as an indication that our state government is suggesting that students not be encouraged to enter the field of Agriculture. I cannot understand this, as Pennsylvania has the largest rural population in the country, and Agriculture is the largest employer in the State.

Please reconsider this budget cut and encourage rather than discourage the investment of our youth in a Agricultural pursuit.

I am writing concerning the FFA cutback of $33,000.00 in Governor Casey's proposed budget. This cutback is one in a long list of cutbacks over the years. Each cutback means something else will be removed from the tools needed to develop a strong FFA Agriculture Youth Leadership Program.

Secretary Wolff's article shows a chart on how much the PA Department of Agriculture is spending on FFA, Young Farmers, and 4-H programs throughout the state. These programs are all needed, however, if you look at the PA FFA Association budget item from 1987-1988 through 1989-1990, the increase was $10,000.00. This still leaves a deficit of $23,000.00. Can this deficit be called a budget cut? In my view, yes.

Key House Subcommittee Endorses

KARL BERGER
Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON, DC— Dairymen probably will face some sort of quota system, but enjoy higher prices than they otherwise would during the next five years if legislation proposed by the House Agriculture Subcommittee on Livestock, Dairy and Poultry makes its way into the 1990 farm bill.

The proposed program, which closely matches many of the farm bill recommendations made by the National Milk Producers Federation, was approved by the influential subcommittee in early April. Its acceptance represents a rejection of the dairy policy advocated by officials of the Bush administration, which calls for annual reductions in the support price to deal with surplus production.

Among other things, the subcommittee's proposal would establish a minimum support price of $10.60 a hundredweight, a check-off system for dealing with excess butterfat production and a two-tiered pricing structure for dealing with an overall surplus. Both the butterfat check-off and the two-tiered pricing would work with "production bases" established by "historical marketings."

Rep. Steve Gunderson of Wisconsin, the ranking Republican on the subcommittee, said, "The premise of this bill is to solve the milk fat surplus and provide... income protection to farms, especially in the face of new technology."

National Milk, which serves as the main lobbying organization for dairy farm interests in Washington, "applauded" the subcommittee's action in its April 9 newsletter. "Conceptually, it parallels the federation's proposal well" in its major aspects, said Dan Lauers, a federation lobbyist.

National Milk has proposed the same $10.60 floor for the support price, now at $10.10 for milk of average butterfat content. The subcommittee's recommendation that a butterfat-based assessment be levied if government purchases of milk fat exceed a certain level is very similar to the Component Adjustment Program (CAP) proposed by the federation. The proposed use of two-tiered pricing likewise matches the federation's call for the implementation of some kind of supply control program in response to a general surplus.

However, Lauers added, the federation is disappointed that the subcommittee continued the practice of basing the so-called "triggers" for the implementation of its assessment and supply control provisions on "mere numbers." For instance, the assessment on marketings of butterfat in excess of the base would be triggered by the projection that the government will buy more than 184 million pounds of butter (the amount contained in 5 billion pounds of milk) in the coming year. The trigger level for two-tiered pricing would be 7 billion pounds.

In its proposal, National Milk has called for the triggers to be based on a percentage of total production, thus allowing the surplus volume permitted without action to rise with increases in the overall volume of the industry.

The subcommittee's trigger mechanism also stops short of using the total milk solids basis espoused by the federation, although it moves away from a projection based solely on milk fat, Lauers said.

One other difference noted by Lauers is that the subcommittee specifies the use of two-tiered pricing to deal with an overall surplus. In effect, this would set up a quota system in which marketings above a certain base level would receive a much lower price than the other milk sold. The federation, by contrast, wants to give the Secretary of Agriculture the flexibility of implementing a whole herd buyout program, a milk diversion plan or two-tiered pricing in response to this situation.

Although subject to approval at various stages in the legislative process as well as reconciliation with any dairy provisions approved by the Senate, the subcommittee's work commands a lot of attention in Washington. Most of the dairy provisions eventually contained in the 1985 farm bill initially emerged from the subcommittee, which includes most of the congressmen who work most closely with dairy policy.

"What's in there now is all that will ever be in there as far as the House is concerned," Lauers predicted. The federation, he said, is focusing further lobbying efforts on the Senate, where Pat Leahy of Vermont is chairman of the Agriculture Committee.

The focus of both the National Milk plan and now the subcommittee's plan on standby supply management rather than price cuts has the backing of cooperatives in the Mid-Atlantic area, according to Jim Fraher, an economist with Atlantic Dairy Cooperative. However, Fraher noted, the possible implementation of a supply control program would not be "in synch" with the continuing tight supply-demand situation in the region. Nor, for that matter, are local dairy farmers likely to suffer the full brunt of any future price cuts because of the prospects for continued over-order premiums.

"The regional supply-demand situation is going to remain the key determinant of whether we have over-order premiums and what level we have," he said.

Select Sires Reports Banner Year

PLAIN CITY, Ohio — "I am pleased to report that 1989 was our best sales year in history," said Richard Chichester, general manager of Select Sires Inc. at the cooperative's 1989 annual meeting.

"Many of our member organizations experienced their best years in 1989; some from both the standpoint of semen sales and financial success. Patronage dividends in several organizations were also at an all-time high," Chichester said.

These comments from Chichester generated enthusiasm among those attending Select's recent annual meeting. Delegates and directors from Select's 12-member co-ops gathered at the organization's Plain City facilities to review the federation's progress.

Chichester also highlighted Select's success from the genetic standpoint, "Our sire programs have never looked brighter. The best group of first-proof sires in our history await their second summaries in July with semen to be released on the very best ones at that time. The reports from the field on these sires are exciting. With these bulls, Select Sires will continue to be a force to be reckoned with in the near term, and hopefully for the long term," he said.

The Year in Review

International marketing highlighted Select's banner year with semen being exported to 60 different countries around the world.

"1989 marked Select Sires' best year ever for international sales with new record setting highs for units and dollars," said George Miller, vice president Marketing and Development.

Brazil was the top unit sales country for the second consecutive year. Holland, West Germany, Brazil, England and Canada were the leading countries in dollar volume. Excellent gains were also made in India, Iran, and Taiwan.

Beef sales for 1989 gained a unit increase of 5.6% over 1988. Roy Wallace, vice president in charge of beef programs, reported on this success. "7AN92 Pine Drive BIG SKY and 7AN95 SCOTCH CAP were the number one and two sires in the breed for registrations, respectively. Select Sires is the first A.I. organization in the breed's history to achieve this milestone."

Embryo freezing and exporting continue to dominate sales for Select Embryos. "More donor recoveries were performed and more embryos were frozen in 1989 than any other year in our history," said Dr. Tye Henchen, general manager of Select Embryos. "In addition, we also had a substantial increase in transfers, both into Select-owned and client-owned recipients."

Select's Board of Directors re-elected Clarence Boyke, East Central/Select Sires, as president of the industry's largest A.I. cooperative. Bill Genasci, All West/Select Sires, will serve as first vice president. VA-NC/Select Sires board member Walter Kingery Jr., was elected second vice president.

PGA Recognition Awards are presented annually to the member cooperatives that most efficiently manage the young sire program in their service areas. Minnesota/Select Sires was awarded the Heifer Efficiency Award for generating the most identified young sires' daughters from the fewest units of PGA semen. They were also awarded the Cow Efficiency Award for identifying milking daughters of PGA sires. The award for the member co-op that showed the most improvement in cow efficiency for 1989 was awarded to Midsouth/Select Sires.

Select Sires Inc. is a family of 12 farmer-owned and controlled cooperatives, serving the largest number of co-op members in the United States. 7H980 Walkway Chief Mark, the most extraordinary type and production sire of the decade, is an example of the superior genetics Select Sires offers. These results assist the federation in achieving its basic objective - to supply livestock breeders with the industry's top genetics.

Cost To Coast Invitational Sale

REYNOLDSBURG, OH — Enthusiasm ran high for the Pride of the West Invitational Sale held in Burlington, WA, Friday, April 6. Nelson auctioneered with Jersey Marketing Service managing the sale. Plans for next year's sale are already underway.

Over 150 people from coast to coast were on hand to witness the second annual sale organized by Paul and Debra Page, Lester Faler, and Karl Krangnes. With over 50 quality animals cataloged, the sale was destined to be a success.

The crowd's attention was quickly caught by the first cow to enter the sale ring, Belvidere Baronet Babs, the high-selling animal of the day. Purchased for $7,700 by The Billings Farm, Woodstock, VT, the Excellent 90% Belvidere Baronet was projected to over 20,000 lbs. milk actual and carried a service to "Sooner," the breed's leading protein sire.

Consignors, John and Bev Tenneson of Sedro Woolley, WA, had success in the show ring with "Babs," the 1st place 5-yr-old at the 1989 Western National Show.

The second high-selling lot was The Forest Glen Fantasy. This unique package created by Forest Glen Jerseys, Dayton, OR, consisted of the buyer's choice of any uncalved female at Forest Glen born before January 1, 1990 and uncalved as of the sale date. With over 400 heifrs to choose from, Cliffhaven Farms, Stanwood, WA, found the offering irresistible at $7,600.

Third high-selling animal was also from Forest Glen Jerseys. Purchased by Dr. Robert Click, River Falls, WI, was Forest Glen Royal Pandora for $4,600. This 3-yr-old, working on another good record, had over 15,000 lbs. milk and over 800 lbs. fat at 1-11.

50 lots were sold through the sale ring averaging $2,672. Ray

College Of Ag Students Win Speech Contest

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Six Penn State students received cash awards for their presentations in the annual Guldin Speaking Contest, which provides a forum for undergraduate students to present short, research-based addresses on key issues in their major area of study.

The Guldin Speaking Contest is sponsored by the Coaly Society, an honor society for students in agriculture, and is made possible by funds donated in memory of Paul R. Guldin, an agricultural leader and poultry farmer from Berks County.

First place went to Mary Ann Keith, daughter of Harry and Joan Keith of Entriken. In her presentation "BST: To Be or Not To Be," Keith examined myths and facts surrounding the bovine growth hormone controversy and then explored the potential effect hormone use or nonuse could have on small and large farmers, consumers and livestock. Keith is a senior majoring in Dairy and Animal Science.

Second place went to Thomas Mitchell, son of Ken and Collette Mitchell of Baltimore, Md. Mitchell, a sophomore majoring in Plant Science, discussed the use of biological controls of insect pests as an alternative to chemical pesticides.

Third place went to Michelle Swope, daughter of Clarence and Margaret Swope of Bernville. Her presentation, "A Diverse Forest," focused on the wide range of learning opportunities and research projects in Penn State's College of Agriculture. Swope is a junior majoring in Agricultural Science.

Fourth place went to Karen Fessler, daughter of Glenn and Joan Fessler of Robesonia. Her address, "Agricultural Education: The Key to Success," concerned the opportunities and challenges open to students in agriculture. Fessler is a freshman majoring in Dairy and Animal Science.

Fifth place prizes went to Lisa Overly, daughter of Tom and Hedy Overly of Littlestown, and Christina White, daughter of Terry and Lillian White of Bethel Park. Overly, a senior majoring in Food Science, spoke about heightened consumer awareness of food safety issues. White, a sophomore majoring in Agricultural Economics, stressed the urgency of providing enough food to feed the world population and discussed alternative production methods such as aquaculture, hydroponics and land expansion.

FARM MANAGEMENT

Roland P. Freund
Regional Farm Management Agent
Penn State Cooperative Extension

As children we experienced the security of having parents control our lives and our affairs. But by the time we were teenagers we wanted more freedom to make our own decisions.

Most adults have worked very hard to increase the amount of control which they can exercise over their affairs.

What is Control?

The dictionary defines control as: "Authority or ability to regulate, direct or influence."

We must be cautious, lest we assume that control equates with success. Control only allows a person to make the decisions. These might lead to success or to failure. This is the risk which managers take.

It is also the risk which people in eastern Europe are very willing to shoulder, because in their experience bureaucratic control has not been successful.

How do we gain control?

In a farming business, one aspect of control is very closely linked with ownership and equity. If someone else owns the asset we are using, there is limit to what we are allowed to do with it. When we rent land or lease facilities we are bound to abide by the terms of an agreement. As long as a lender holds a mortgage or a lein, we are not free to dispose of the asset as we see fit.

Many farmers gain more and more control over their farm operations as they retire debt over many years. Others grow into it through undertaking increased responsibility and management, such as in a family partnership.

Unfortunately, too many of the younger generation have to wait until they inherit it, since father is reluctant to give up the reins.

In a well-organized family farm business there must be a plan for transferring the management and the control of the operation from one generation to the next. This may be linked in stages to the transfer of ownership of assets, while maintaining elders' security.

Maintaining business control

A business involves more than asset ownership. It includes production processes and all the planning and decisions that might be involved with livestock and crop enterprises, plus the finances and all the human resources involved. A great deal of attention to detail must be given to stay on top of these processes and decisions.

Sometimes managers use agri-service people to do the legwork needed for specific tasks such as soil testing, field scouting, forage testing and ration balancing. These are valuable resource people, but care must be exercised to avoid giving up control of the business to their commercial interests.

In most cases they are trustworthy and honest specialists, but we need to understand the relationship.

When we allow them to make all the decisions about the fertilizer needs and application rates, or the feed purchases, then we are giving up control over that aspect of the business.

Giving up some degree of control in exchange for a lower level of risk is a very valid course of action, and may be a wise business strategy.

Giving a business a blank check or a line of credit in your name to supply your "needs" without any market or price gaurantee may actually increase your exposure to risk.

Unless you are the type of person who enjoys walking through alligator ponds, approach such arrangements with similar caution.

Contracts and control

In the poultry industry, and to a lesser extent the swine industry, large integrated contractors dominate. They can exercise greater control in the marketplace over product and feed prices.

The small independent producer may be unable to compete in this environment. To gain advantage from the contractor's position the farmer has the option of working under contract.

If new investments are required for a contract, review the terms very carefully to evaluate your risk. Empty buildings don't pay mortgages, so unless the contract clearly controls throughput, your risk is great.

Empty verbal promises don't stand up in court. If it's not in writing don't sign. The contract is the only control you will have. When a contractor goes through bankruptcy or is absorbed by another company, contracts have been renegotiated downward.

This is a risk that you and your banker need to discuss before you embark upon the enterprise.

Control and/or Security

Farm ownership is the major investment that farmers have for their security in old age. In any transfer arrangements, care should be taken to maintain parents' control over this asset.

The next generation can rent it, use it, and produce from it. They should not expect to remortgage it or use it to finance depreciable assets unless parents have other substantial investments for their security.

Gaining control over a business is usually a long and difficult task. Transferring this control to the next generation should be a carefully planned process.

Giving up control to somebody else could involve risks which should never be ignored.

Recycling Program Collects Mini Bulk Containers

GREENSBORO, N.C.— Ciba-Geigy, a leading manufacturer of agricultural chemicals, has completed a nationwide recycling program that collected hundreds of older, outdated mini bulk pesticide containers and replaced them with newer, more environmentally sound tanks.

The Farm-Pak Recycle Program is one of the first recycling programs organized by an agri-chemical company, according to Jerry Zeller, national sales director for Ciba-Geigy. Only a few limited-scale programs have been conducted in different parts of the country until now. Company officials are so pleased with the recycling program that Zeller said it may be the start of broader-scale recycling efforts in the future.

Final collection figures after the three-month program estimate Ciba-Geigy netted about 30 percent of the potential Farm-Pak mini bulk containers available for recycling. Company officials had expected to collect 20 percent. In addition, nearly all of the returned mini bulks showed low residue levels, an important key if containers can be recycled for future use.

"You might ask why we didn't get more than 30 percent," said Zeller, who helped organize the program. "Many of our Farm-Pak mini bulk tanks are still in very good condition. In fact, many dealers are going to use them again this season. They aren't ready to take them out of circulation.

"But some dealers were pleased to dispose of older tanks," said Zeller. "We gave them an opportunity to take worn containers out of circulation, so they're glad they don't have to worry about how to get rid of them later."

Ciba-Geigy's newer Farm-Pak ® CS, a totally closed, reuseable mini bulk dispensing system, has become extremely popular because it reduces personal exposure and use of smaller, non-recyclable containers. Recent research indicates Farm-Pak removed more than a million 2½ gallon jugs from the waste disposal system since it was introduced three years ago.

This year, Ciba-Geigy improved the Farm-Pak CS design even further, making it more environmentally sound and easier to store. The new systems were offered to dealers who participated in the recycling program in exchange for older systems.

"For Ciba-Geigy to take the initiative and organize a recycling program is a big step," said Todd Davis, pesticide manager, Milford Fertilizer Company, Milford, DE. "They simply gave us an opportunity to eliminate any potential risk without pressuring us." Milford Fertilizer was one of more than 70 dealerships across the country that served as a recycling drop-off site.

"The new tanks give us more peace of mind as we go into a new season," said Phil Pearce, agronomy manager, Mt. Vernon Farmers Exchange, Mt. Vernon, OH. He says reuseable mini bulk systems such as Farm-Pak CS are a critical component of the industry's future. Continued use of mini bulks, said Pearce, combined with an effective recycling program is a responsible environmental approach.

"I want them to continue the program," said Pearce. "This program defintely works for us."

Association Wants To Reverse U.S. Oat Production Trend

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. — Citing a recent United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) report which estimated 1990 oat plantings will be down 8 percent from the 1989 level of 6.874 million acres, Pat Henderson, executive director of the American Oat Association (AOA), called on Congress to draft a 1990 Farm Bill which would provide a reliable supply of domestically produced oats.

The 1990 planting intentions are only marginally higher than the lowest historical harvested acreage of 5.59 million acres in the 1988 drought year, Henderson said.

The United States is currently importing approximately 60 million bushels of oats each year to meet the rising demand for food quality oats. The total oat disappearance for food, feed, and seed is approximately 400 million bushels.

Food use continues to grow and is now estimated at nearly 100 million bushels per year. Due primarily to guaranteed government programs, U.S. oat production continues to decline as producers shift to crops which provide a higher return. Harvested oat acreage, which has fallen nearly 30 percent since the early 1980s, averaged 8.98 million acres in crop years, 1980/81 to 1985/86.

In recent crop years 1986/87 to 1988/89, harvested oat acreage averaged 6.45 million acres. The decreased production of U.S. Oats has forced U.S. oat processors to build, or consider building, procesing plants closer to the source of supply in foreign countries.

Henderson said that representatives of the American Oat Association have testified in congressional hearings to encourage target price equity for oats in relationship to other program crops. She said the AOA will continue to press the members and staff of the House and Senate agriculture committees to protect the future of the U.S. oat industry during the 1990 Farm Bill deliberations.

Conference Examines Cooperative Business

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — "Cooperatve Education Brings Harmony in the 90s" is the theme of the 1990 Young Cooperative Leaders (YCL) Conference sponsored by the Pennsylvania Association of Farmer Cooperatives (PAFC).

Open to cooperative members between the ages of 22 and 35, this conference is designed to provide information to better inform its participants about the importance of cooperative business principles.

According to Jay V. Rush, president of York Farm Credit, ACA and current president of the PAFC board of directors, those who attend the YCL conference are often looked upon as the cooperative leaders of the future. "This program is an excellent training ground for today's leaders of tomorrow's cooperative," Rush said.

The dates and location for the 1990 PAFC Young Cooperative Leaders Conference are July 9-11 at Toftrees Resort in State College. The registration is open to those in the specified age range that belong to an agricultural or rural cooperative. Cooperatives and other organizations that sponsor attendees do not have to be members of PAFC. The registration fee is $350 per couple or $250 per person.

Program highlights include presentations by Dr. Bernie Ervin from the Ohio State University, Don Rogers from the Springfield Bank for the cooperatives, and Joy Dunbar from Penn State University.

Contact Carol Buckhout, PAFC executive director, (814) 231-3010, for more information.

She Knows Every Inch Of Fence

Linda Williams
Bedford Co. Correspondent

BEDFORD (Bedford Co.) — When Glenna Fisher's husband, Frank, died in 1988, she made up her mind not to give up the farm.

"Frank loved this place," Glenna says as she gazes out the big picture window of the rambling farm house. "He was a plasterer and always worked away while I took care of the farm. If I did it all those years, I can still do it."

Cattle raising was always a hobby for the Fishers on this 139-acre farm located near Imlertown in Bedford County. This spring, Glenna has 22 pregnant black Angus and is buying a new bull.

"I always go to the Performance Tested Bull Sale at Penn State," she explains. "Even if the prices go too high, I get a lot of good leads and have always found excellent bulls."

Fixing fences is part of the routine of Glenna's life. "It's the main problem with raising beef cattle," she says. "Believe me I know every inch of fence on this place. And, I know how to fix it."

During the summer months, when farming is in full progress, Glenna is joined by her grandson, Scott Claycomb, who is studying to be a pharmacist. He mows and hauls in the hay and works part time at Fisher's Pharmacy in Bedford. "He's always spent his summers with me," Glenna explains. "And, he loves the country. He just can't wait to get here. I don't know what I would ever do without him or my son-in-law. Both of them do the heavy part of the farming."

When the chores of feeding, breeding, and keeping the beef cattle confined are finished, Glenna heaves a sigh of relief and then plunges into one of her many projects.

She's a history buff who has traced her family tree back for many generations on both sides. When she finished with that, she began working on her husband's.

Frank was a corporal in the Marines in World War II with the 23rd Regiment that fought on Iwo Jima and the Marshall Islands. Frank stood by and watched as his Marine friends raised the flag on Iwo Jima.

Each year, Glenna is responsible for planning a reunion of the 23rd Regiment, a tradition she has carried on ever since Frank's death. Last year, the company awarded her with a plaque for her many years of outstanding service in planning this annual event.

She has compiled a huge scrapbook of photographs and other memorabilia of Frank's Marine career. "It will be something to pass on to my grandchildren," she says. "I want them to know what a fine man their grandfather was."

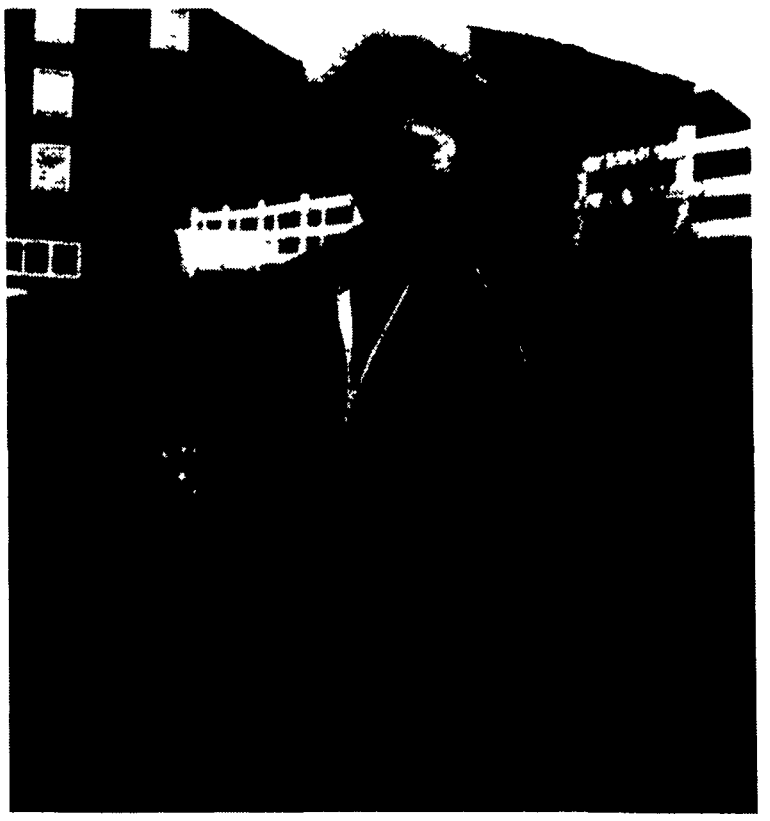
Glenna is a member of AIHD (American Industrial Heritage Descendants), and the Daughters of the American Revolution, and State Credential Chairman for the 17th Century Colonial Dames, her membership in these organizations was earned through the efforts of her ancestor, John Blackburn, a treasurer in York County.

As vice president of the Bedford County Pioneer Historical Society, Glenna is chairman of the annual local historical essay contest.

This past winter, she kept busy by sorting and separating 2,800 obituaries for the Pioneer Society library. She also catalogues births and marriages. "This makes it easier for others who want to do geneology research," she explains.

"When I get depressed, I just go to the courthouse and bury myself in the documents in the basement," she said with a smile.

Her interest in geneology has led her to friendships with people from all over the United States. "Bedford was the gateway to the west and a lot of people have roots in this area," Glenna points out. "I always try to be of as much help as possible when someone is doing research."



Glenna Fisher was recently awarded a plaque by the 23rd Marine Regiment for her many years of service in planning annual events for this group to which her husband, Frank Fisher, belonged. The regiment fought on Iwo Jima and the Marshall Islands during World War II.

Glenna Fisher and a young visitor, Cory McConnell, stand in her spacious back yard while her herd of black angus cattle look on.

Geneology research came about as a result of her efforts to trace her ancestory which would prove her right to membership in Daughters of the American Revolution.

She has spent several days this winter helping members of the nearby 200-year-old Messiah Lutheran Church with their geneology research.

During the summer months, Glenna decorates every nook and corner of her spacious lawn with flowers. Last year, her herb garden won her local chapter of the Colonial Dames, a state award.

She loves crafts, especially country items and shares an interest in this with her daughter, Kathy.

A quilting frame is always set up in one of the spare rooms. "I love to quilt," she says. "And, when I can't sleep at night, I don't waste time worrying about it, I just get up and quilt."

While Glenna can look every inch the farmer when tending the cows, she also enjoys fashion and dressing up for her many historical social functions.

One of her most amusing stories involves the day the state senator was to be the guest speaker at the annual Washington's Birthday luncheon. Glenna was wearing her brand new leather dress boots.

As she pulled from the driveway, she noticed that the gate was open and the cattle were about to wander onto the highway. "I didn't have any trouble coaxing them back into the barn," she remembers. "They were stunned when they saw me wearing my dressup clothes."

Not giving the incident another thought, Glenna continued on her way to the luncheon at a nearby restaurant. "I would have forgotten it completely if the cow manure on the bottom of my boot had not started to thaw out during the meal," she remembers, laughing. "I don't think the senator ate a bite. My friends in DAR have never let me forget it."

Glenna maintains a swimming pool in the backyard which she enjoys in the summer with her family, three grown daughters, her son-in-laws, and four grandchildren. Frank and I built it ourselves, she remembers fondly.

Dairy Goat Association Sends Goats To Guatemala

A Guatemalan woman greets a goat that she will use to feed her family. The goat was given by the PA Mountains Dairy Goat Association.

HAWLEY (Wayne Co.) — Last fall, the Pennsylvania Mountains Dairy Goat Association voted to send money to Guatemala to purchase two female goats to further a goat project that helps local women feed their families. The club's connection with Guatemala developed as a result of a request for the dairy goat management videotape produced by the club. The video was lost in the mail and never reached its destination. Unfortunately the U.S. Post Office does not insure mail to Guatemala.

The club voted to send another tape at no cost. The replacement was hand carried and arrived safely. It was shown to the local women involved in the goat project and provoked much giggling! The women were very interested in the Nubian dairy goats featured in the video. Their goats had previously been mostly Swiss-type goats. So the decision was made to purchase two Nubian goats. The first photos of the new goat owners were displayed at the club's last meeting to the delight of the members. The Nubians are doing well in the arid climate.

The goat projects are the work of the Maryknoll Missionaries. The first project started in 1987 with 16 women each receiving two goats and instructions on their care with the provision that two female goats be given to another woman later on.

Most of the members of the Guatemalan goat project are women with small children. The goat's milk will replace the powdered milk in their diets. Powdered milk is often mixed with water that is unwholesome. It should also be possible for the families to sell excess milk or goat offspring.

The Pennsylvania Mountains Dairy Goat Association has members from five counties in northeastern PA. For more information about the club contact Grant Stiles at 717 689-9229.

MICROWAVE MINUTES

By JOYCE BATTCHER

Now that asparagus is in supermarkets, it won't be long until it starts popping up in gardens. If you're a gardener, you know how fast asparagus grows. And if you're a microwave cook, you'll appreciate how fast asparagus microwaves.

Fast microwaving and adding just a little water during cooking preserve the fresh, mild taste of asparagus, along with its valuable nutrients.

Add about a tablespoon of water for each half pound of asparagus. Cover the dish tightly, using plastic wrap on a tight-fitting lid. Stir pieces or rearrange spears halfway through cooking. Cook the minimum time and allow for continued cooking during standing time. If you use salt, sprinkle it on after cooking.

Microwaving time for asparagus varies greatly, so be careful not to overlook it. A pound of straight-from-the garden thin asparagus pieces (about four cups) cooks to tender-crisp in as little as 2½ to three minutes. Thick asparagus spears and refrigerated asparagus need more cooking time, but not much. Start with minimum time and add more if necessary.

For even cooking, asparagus spears should be the same thickness. When buying asparagus in the supermarket, select uniformly thick spears from an open bin or pick a package of even-sized spears. When sorting asparagus from your garden, group pencil-thin spears together for one recipe and thumb-thick spears together for another recipe. If you can't get ideal spears, cut them to promote even cooking. Split half-inch or thicker stems or cut tip ends slightly longer than stem ends. Arrange thicker spears toward outside edges of dish or cook thick pieces a bit before adding thin pieces.

Asparagus Mexicano is a tasty vegetable dish. It gives you basic directions for cooking a pound of cut asparagus. For a more elegant look, follow the variation using asparagus spears.

Easy Asparagus, Tuna and Rice Casserole is just what the name says. All the ingredients cook together in about seven minutes. Be sure to allow about five minutes of standing time after cooking for the asparagus to finish tenderizing and for the rice to absorb liquid and finish cooking.

Asparagus Mexicano

1 pound asparagus (16-24 medium-size spears)
2 tablespoons water
½ cup chunky or fresh salsa
2 ounces (½ cup) shredded Monterey Jack cheese

Rinse asparagus well. Snap off tough stem ends and discard. Cut tip ends 2 inches long and remaining stems 1½ inches long. There should be about 4 cups. Place asparagus and water in microwave-safe 1½-quart casserole. Cover with plastic wrap or lid. Microwave (High) 4 to 5 minutes or until asparagus is just tender, stirring after 2 minutes. Drain. Stir in salsa and sprinkle with cheese. Re-cover. Microwave on Medium (50 percent power, 325-350 watts) 2 to 3 minutes or until cheese barely starts to melt. Makes 4 servings.

With asparagus spears: Rinse asparagus well. Snap off tough ends and discard. Hold tips evenly together and cut off bottom ends so spears are about 6 inches long. (Save remaining ends for another use.) Place asparagus in microwave-safe 6x11-inch rectangular dish or loaf dish, arranging so asparagus tips are to center and stem ends to outside edge of dish. Cover with plastic wrap. Microwave (High) 3 to 4 minutes or until tender-crisp when pierced with fork. Continue as above.

Each serving: 101 calories, 6g protein, 4g fat, 7g carbohydrate, 143mg sodium, 14mg cholesterol.

Easy Asparagus, Tuna and Rice Casserole

½ pound asparagus (8-12 medium-size spears)
1 can (8 ounces) sliced water chestnuts, drained
1 cup instant rice
1 cup water
¼ cup sliced green onions (white parts only)
1 tablespoon soy sauce
Dash black pepper
Soy sauce (optional)

Rinse asparagus well. Snap off tough stems ends and discard. Cut tips each 1 inch long and remaining stems 1½ inches long. There should be 2 to 2½ cups. Place asparagus in microwave-safe 2-quart casserole with water chestnuts, rice, water, green onion, 1 tablespoon soy sauce, and black pepper; stir. Cover with lid or plastic wrap. Microwave (High) 6 to 8 minutes, stirring after 4 minutes, or until asparagus is barely tender. Let stand, covered, 5 minutes to finish cooking asparagus and rice. Serve with additional soy sauce, if desired. Makes 4 to 5 servings.

Hint: If you like asparagus more tender, precook it 2 minutes with a tablespoon of the water called for. Stir in remaining ingredients and continue as above.

Each serving — 1/5 of recipe: 120 calories, 5g protein, 0 fat, 17g carbohydrate, 363mg sodium, 22mg cholesterol.

Questions and answers—

Q. We popped popcorn in our microwave and when we took out the dish, the bottom had melted and the dish had a hole in it. Was the microwave at fault or the dish? We bought the dish for a microwave oven.

A. If the bowl was part of a special microwave popcorn popper, then the bowl was defective. I'd try returning it to the store where you bought it.

If the bowl was just a microwave-safe bowl, it should not be used for popping corn. If you have the label yet, check to see if popping corn is recommended. An ordinary microwave-safe plastic bowl can melt when popping corn. A microwave-safe glass bowl can shatter.

Only specially designed microwave poppers should be used. Some look like ordinary bowls — but they aren't.

Q. Can a person use a microwave oven for sterilization of potting soil? If so, how long?

No. Soil should not be sterilized in the microwave oven. There may be pieces of metal in it that could cause arcing during microwaving. Also, it is a very dry material, so it might cause damage to the oven.

Q. Somewhere I read the directions to make nuts (like pecans and walnuts) easier to shell. Could you please tell me how to do this?

A. Place about 2 cups of nuts and ¼ cups of water in a microwave-safe dish. Cover and microwave (High) 1 to 2 minutes, or until hot. Dry with paper towels. Shell while slightly warm.

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

There's just no understanding it. No understanding it at all.

Here I've already given them the best years of my life, and this is the thanks I get. You give 'em your love, you give 'em your devotion and they turn around and treat you like this.

And, to add insult to injury, I found it out in the rudest way.

There I was peacefully snoozing in my own living room, like I always do in early evening, curled up with the cozy afghan on the beanbag chair. Everyone else goes to the barn, the house is peaceful, and nothing disturbs my after-supper nap.

Then from out of nowhere, without even the slightest warning, mind you, this hairy, smelly beast came galloping through my house, invading my house. I leaped straight into the air out of a sound sleep and streaked into hiding.

And he came after me. Running. Jumping. Barking. Likely to scare me to death. Such an indignity. Such an embarrassment. Life hasn't been the same since. It's an unforgiveable cat-astrophe.

A dog in MY house.

As if it wasn't bad enough when they used to let that other dog in sometimes. He'd curl up on the basement stairs landing and I'd have to make a dash down the steps and past him to get down to my litter box. He never bothered me though, or chased me, or even paid any attention to the kittens I used to raise in here.

Now, though, now it's a different story. Frankly, I don't feel comfortable setting a single paw down anywhere but upstairs, where there are beds to crawl under and an attic to flee to if I have to.

Now he's outside most of the time, so once in a while, I'll let them carry me back downstairs, or I'll sneak down and peek around the corner. But even when he isn't there, it smells like he is. That funny-looking dog food is in a bowl right next to my cat food dish. And he drops hair all over the rug where I used to stretch out to sleep on hot summer afternoons.

And the way they fuss over him! "Nice Solomon. Smart Solomon. Pretty dog. Solomon's a gooood boy."

Why, it's enough to give a dignified cat like myself a hissy fit.

Miniature collie, I heard them say. Four years old. Has to be given away by a former neighbor. Barks, but wouldn't bite. Grew up with a cat, so wouldn't chase them. Ha! That's what they think.

Why doesn't he go chase the barn cats? I wouldn't mind helping him with a couple of them, in fact.

And, bark. Why, he barks at everyone that comes close to the place. They seem to think that's OK, that he's letting them know whenever anyone's around. Me? I'd like to slip him a hairball to hush 'im up before he interrupts my catnaps one more time.

So what if he has a beautiful long coat and waving tail? So what if he catches Frisbees and fetches balls and sticks and bats balloons in the air and rides in trucks and barks at those big, galloping cows? Next thing, he'll probably even take over MY favorite black rubber ball and chase shoestrings.

Well, I'll show those ingrates. I'll just stay upstairs and sleep on the beds and hide in the attic and not sit on their laps and purr or rub against their ankles or keep their chairs warm or any of those housecat responsibilities they've come to expect. That'll show 'em. Maybe they'll get rid of this pest in MY house.

Come to think of it, I did hear them discussing something about getting him nullified, or neutralized, or naturalized, or something like that. Seems to me I remember them talking about that before they took me to that awful place that made me feel so blah for a couple of days. Boy, I hope they go through that with him. Bet he wouldn't chase me for a while.

Yep. Betcha' that'll fix him.

Association Takes Time To 'Handspin'

LITITZ (Lancaster Co.) — Members and guests of The Greater Appalachian Llama Association (GALA) gathered at Northwest Farm on April 8, 1990 for a seminar, "Handspinning with Llama Fiber."

Co-chairing this event were Marj Gerhart, Northwest Farm, Lititz, and Lynn Zerphey, Sheepberry Farms, Lebanon, Pennsylvania.

Gerhart and Zerphey have been handspinning for several years and had participated in local and state demonstrations and competitions.

The seminar opened with a brief overview of llama fiber. Some of the positive characteristics of llama fiber are warm, light in weight, soft, and many natural colors. On the negative side, llama fiber has little elasticity, is harmed by sunlight, and is subject to some shrinkage and moth attack.

Participating in the seminar was Carol Sanderson, owner of the Golden Lamb spinning/weaving studio in Lititz. An accomplished spinner and weaver, Carol demonstrated proper hand carding techniques (combing the fibers). She brought two styles of spinning wheels, a Luet and an Ashford, and gave each member an opportunity to spin on each type of wheel.

Throughout the seminar, there was lively discussion of llamas; when crias, baby llamas, are expected; and plans for llama fiber sweaters. Marj Gerhart modeled a woven/knitted vest made from the fibers of her llamas, alpaca, and sheep. Other natural fibers were on display, such as sheep wool, angora rabbit, mohair (goat fiber), and dog hair. A brief discussion on blending fibers and the techniques for producing multi-fiber yarns were also covered.

Old-Fashioned Corn Meal Making A Comeback

Some days the aroma of freshly popped corn floods the Penryn valley in Lancaster County — but the smell isn't from popcorn — it is from freshly roasted corn that will be ground into cornmeal.

Cornmeal, a staple product in the kitchens of pioneers, is making a comeback among modern cooks. Cornmeal is roasted corn that is ground into flour. Because it contains the hull and wheat germ, cornmeal makes a nutritious bran for muffins, griddlecakes, mush and other recipes.

Twenty-one years ago, James and Donna Haldeman of Haldeman Mills, Penryn, purchased a cornmeal business that had been established in 1880 by S.C. Brinser.

The Haldemans have since moved the Middletown business to the Penryn area. The process begins by cleaning and roasting field corn in a coffee bean roaster. Each batch takes 800 pounds of corn that is then ground into fine meal and packaged for sale. Much of the bulk is purchased by butchers to use in making scrapple. The remainder is packaged in two-pound bags for sale in grocery chains and other stores.

"Corn pone is wonderful with strawberries, blueberries, peaches and other fresh fruit," Donna said.

Ironically, during her growing up years, Donna did not like corn mush. She remembers the plate set before her and her mother warning, "Eat it or go to bed."

Donna recalls, "I went to bed."

But that was years ago. Now Donna loves it and enjoys developing new recipes for cornmeal. Her newest creation is funnel cakes using cornmeal flour.

Plow lines or plow cakes were names used for these wonderful lacy hotcakes that originally were served as a breakfast treat. Reportedly, the funnel cakes were made by the dozens to be taken to the fields where the men ate them as a mid-morning snack with cider.

Today, funnel cakes are one of the most popular treats sold at community farm shows and fairs.

Many people think funnel cakes are difficult to make, but Donna said they are really quite simple. The recipe is included in today's collection.

If you cannot purchase cornmeal or the Dutch Funnel Cake Mix at your local grocery, mail order from James H. Haldeman, R. 5, Manheim, PA 17545 or call (717) 665-2339.

If you like funnel cakes, you'll love these made with cornmeal.

Donna Haldeman of Haldeman's Mill, Penryn, recently developed this recipe with the help of her husband who roasts and grinds corn for the delicious flavored corn meal.

Plow lines or plow cakes were names used for these wonderful lacy hotcakes that originally were served as a breakfast treat. Reportedly, the funnel cakes were made by the dozens to be taken to the fields where the men ate them as a mid-morning snack with cider.

Today, funnel cakes are one of the most popular treats sold at community farm shows and fairs.

Many people think funnel cakes are difficult to make, but Donna said they are really quite simple with her recipe mix.

If you cannot purchase cornmeal or the Dutch Funnel Cake Mix at your local grocery, mail order from James H. Haldeman, R. 5, Manheim, PA 17545 or call (717) 665-2339.

Donna said that they will bill you with the shipment.

DUTCH FUNNEL CAKES

2 cups Haldeman's funnel cake mix
1 egg
1½ cups water

Beat by hand until batter is smooth, like cake batter, so it will flow through a funnel opening in an unbroken stream.

Heat oil, about 1-inch deep, to frying temperature (375 degrees). Put finger under funnel and fill with desired amount of batter. Carefully hold funnel about 5 inches above hot oil, remove finger so batter will flow into oil as you make circles and crisscross designs.

Let cake fry until golden brown, turn and brown other side. Place on paper towel. Serve sprinkled with confectioners' sugar or top with ice cream.

Poached eggs are particularly quick and easy to microwave. Once the water boils, it takes only 3 to 5 minutes to poach 4 eggs at a time (depending on how firm you like your yolks and on the power of your microwave). For a fast entree, serve poached eggs on your favorite cooked vegetable combination and top with creamy salad dressing, cheese sauce or dip thinned with milk.

Egg yolks cook faster than egg whites in a microwave because they contain fat, which attracts energy. For best results, novices should start by preparing egg dishes in which yolks and whites are blended together, which aids in even cooking. These include omelets, scrambles, quiches, stratas and frittatas. Consult your microwave oven owner's manual or a special microwave cookbook for the proper techniques.

Kids Have Worries Too

SCRANTON (Lackawanna Co.)— Which one of the following two situations do you think would cause your child more stress: facing an operation or having to give a report in class?

Most parents would be inclined to pick the "operation" answer and they are wrong.

A study being conducted by the University of Colorado with 2,000 kindergartners through ninth-graders is revealing that children aren't worrying about major catastrophes like the end of the world or nuclear war. They're more worried about getting a bad grade on a test or having the teacher yell at them in front of the class.

Children's biggest fears are losing a parent and going blind. Next on their list are being held back a grade, wetting in class, being suspected of lying or stealing and being sent to the principal's office. Way down on their list are events that parents may think are more threatening like having an operation or adjusting to a new baby in the house.

Before parents can help their children overcome their anxieties, they need to have a clearer understanding of what really troubles children.

There are simple steps parents can take with children that go a long way toward easing their stress. Here's what the experts advise:

• Let children solve problems on their own. Antoinette Saunders, PhD, author and director of the Stress Education Center For Children And Their Families in Evanston, Illinois, teaches kids a five-step problem-solving process that works in any situation: relax, understand the problem; outline the options; rate the possible outcomes; choose the best solution.

• Set aside time each day to really listen to your child's problems.

• Pay attention to praise. Children should be praised not just for their achievements but also for their performances. If kids are praised only for their outstanding report cards or test grades, then they struggle to try to achieve at that high level. It's important to praise children for who they are as people, too.

Be aware of when your children may be feeling stressed out and try to help them cope with it. Remember, it's a fact of life -- everyone experiences stress. Help your children handle stress by talking out their problems with them and making sure they get their exercise and eat properly.

Honest Talk About Real Families

I can remember visiting relatives and my parents' friends when I was young. They always seemed to rave about how wonderful my sisters, brother and I were. Inside I knew that we weren't so wonderful all the time. This was our public face, but at home we had the usual teen sibling battles. And we tested our parents.

But no one would have guessed this. I think that's the way it is with most families. We have a public face and a private face. Sometimes those are very different; sometimes the one's simply a rosier version of family togetherness. It's uncomfortable for people to talk honestly about normal family tensions and struggles -- to admit that their family isn't perfect.

Unfortunately, people feel isolated in their homes -- no one else has had a star athlete arrested; no one else has had a loving daughter turn into a hateful, rebellious teen; no one else has worked through a lukewarm marriage instead of getting out and getting a fresh start.

Let me share a few statistics with you about families, the families in your towns -- your neighbors, your cousins, and even your children.

Each year 480,000 teens have babies. Cancers accounted for 22.4% of all deaths in 1987. In 1980, an estimated 9.2 million U.S. households contained a married couple in which at least one of the spouses was remarried after a divorce. With the 1990 census report, that figure will be updated. One out of every four women will be raped, sexually assaulted or sexually abused at least once in her lifetime.

These are hard, cold numbers, but they talk about real, feeling people.

No one has been in exactly the same situation that you are in, but many have walked similar paths and faced similar decisions. I encourage you to begin sharing some of your experiences and concerns with a group of friends. I've found that the process of actually putting words to those vague feelings of failure and frustration brings relief. Then realizing that others have known those struggles (and that most have actually overcome them) brings additional confidence that a family is not hopeless.

You can do some things to begin improving the way your family handles challenges and choices. First it is important to bring issues out in the open. Don't avoid talking about problems. When held inside and allowed to fester, small spats can grow into giant divisions.

Remember also to not only discuss problems but also to foster good in yourself and your family. Begin to give those you care about new messages. Give encouragement that is matched to the other person's needs.

• With your infant try: "I'm glad you're alive." "You belong here." "You can grow at your own pace."

• With your 6- to 18-month-old: "You can do things as many times as you need to." "I love you when you are active and when you are quiet."

• With your 18-month to 3-year-old: "I'm glad you are starting to think for yourself." "You can say no and push and test limits as much as you need to." "You can become separate from me, and I will continue to love you."

• With your 3- to 6-year-old: "All of your feelings are okay with me." "You can be powerful and ask for help at the same time."

• With your 6- to 12-year-old: "You can think before you say yes or no and learn from your mistakes." "You can learn the rules that help you live with others." "I love you even when we differ; I love growing with you."

• With your adolescent: "You can develop your own interests, relationships and causes." "I look forward to knowing you as an adult."

• For other adults in your life: "Your needs are important." "You can trust your inner wisdom." "You can say your hellos and goodbyes to people, roles, dreams and decisions." "You are loveable at any age."

These phrases were collected by Jean Illsley Clarke, and expert on family self-esteem. At times these new messages may be spoken messages, but at other times (particularly in the teen years) these must be communicated in actions or written on slips of paper and stuck on the refrigerator or tucked in a dresser drawer.

Yes, families do experience problems. Yes, it's important to recognize trouble and to face it head on. By sharing concerns with other caring adults, we can encourage one another to keep trying. And by learning to give "new messages," we can build confidence in others preparing them to face the unknown challenges of the future. It takes time and courage to talk honestly. But honest talk brings new life to people who feel alone in their struggles.

Hey kids! Scrambled eggs are easy to make in the microwave oven -- and come out really good. Beat two eggs in a small container. Microwave on high for 1 to 1½ minutes. Stir once, halfway through. (You can add other ingredients, like cheese or meats, to make them taste even more yummy.) They're neat to eat in pita bread pockets or mini taco shells.

Guess what makes a neat sandwich? A fried egg! Cook up a couple in a small skillet, get out the bread, and pile the sandwich high with ketchup, mustard, pickle relish, cheese, lettuce, tomatoes and more and more and more. Tastes great!

Should You Use Commercially Prepared Baby Food Or Make Your Own?

Quality, purity, freshness, safety, convenience, cost are all factors that need to be taken into consideration when you choose between home-prepared or commercially-prepared baby foods. The choice is not always clear-cut. For example, home prepared is not necessarily cheaper, nor is commercially prepared less fresh.

Consumer confidence in the baby food industry has eroded over the past several years, following reports of dilution of apple juice, contamination by non-food products and the growing concerns over pesticides. The emergence of several baby food companies producing a limited selection of "pesticide-free" products -- at double the cost -- adds to parental confusion over the safety of prepared products from the traditional baby food companies. Yet changing life styles, reliance on convenience products and the early return of mothers into the work force may override many parents' concerns.

A recent research study conducted in a middle-income Canadian city determined that most mothers were using both commercial and home-prepared foods. The mothers choose the commercial food primarily for convenience. The study revealed that, although vegetables were cheaper to prepare than to buy, meats and meat with vegetable dishes were actually more expensive to prepare. If the preparer's time, equipment, and fuel expenses are included in calculating cost, about one-half of all homemade products would be more expensive than the commercial ones.

Better quality and lower costs were reasons cited for home preparation of baby food. However, many parents tended to add salt and other condiments to home-prepared foods. These ingredients are no longer added to commercial products. In addition, home preparation was not always done following appropriate guidelines and techniques. This suggests that, unless careful procedures are followed, home-prepared baby foods may be subject to contamination by bacteria.

Before you make your decision about whether to make your own baby food or buy commercially prepared baby food, you need to consider not only the amount of time you have to prepare your own baby food, but also how much you know about food safety! Perhaps it may not only be cheaper to buy commercially prepared baby food -- it may also be a safer source of food for your baby.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

Our visit to Colonial Wiliiamsburg, Virginia, was pleasant and the weather could not have been more delightful. After buying our tickets, we saw a very dramatic movie of our country's history prior to the Revolutionary War.

A bus took us to the historic area and we walked all day from one building to another. The streets were closed to automotive traffic during the day. We visited a Blacksmith Shop, a Harness Shop, a Bake Shop and a Wigmaker among many others.

The blacksmith was forging metal and hammering it into objects to restore more buildings. They were making shutter stops and nails while we were there. The harness shop made many useful leather objects and not simply harnesses. Shelves around the room contained finished items.

The bake shop was well patronized as the sweet smell of spices in the cookies permeated the air. And, outside the shop, lilac bushes were in bloom so we had to pause to take in the heavenly aroma.

The wigmaker told us that the men and women of the 18th century shaved their heads in order to wear wigs. George Washington was different as he had his own hair curled rather than wear a wig.

Our guided tour of the Capitol was very interesting. We saw the huge room where the House of Burgesses met. Many spring flowers were blooming around the buildings and in the gardens. The Wythe House was an example of how the more wealthy people of the time lived.

A round building called "Magazine" previously was a storehouse for gun powder. Now it is a museum type building with hundreds of guns on display. Even uniforms of the period were shown.

Late in the afternoon we ended up at the Shields Tavern where we were served a plate containing a sample of six foods from the 18th century. We arrived too late to see Carter's Grove plantation.

My daughter drove us home the next day and I had one day to prepare for our flight to Atlanta to visit our son and daughter and their families.

Osteoporosis Prevention

NEW YORK, NY — More individuals are afflicted with osteoporosis each year, according to the National Osteoporosis Foundation, and prevention of this bone-thinning disease is the most practical approach. From May 13 to May 19, promoters of the sixth annual National Osteoporosis Prevention Week will encourage lifestyle choices that help guard against osteoporosis.

More than 24 million people develop osteoporosis, resulting in more than 1.3 million fractures each year of the hip, spine and wrist.

Although the exact cause of osteoporosis is unknown, there are healthy lifestyle choices that may reduce the risk of developing the disorder. To decrease your risk of developing osteoporosis while helping yourself to better overall health, follow this advice from Dairy Council Inc.:

1. Eat a balanced diet rich in calcium. Calcium helps build bone tissue during childhood and adulthood, and may help prevent losses thereafter. Many Americans, especially women and adolescent girls, consume less calcium than recommended.

Calcium is found primarily in dairy products, canned salmon and sardines with edible bones, and several dark green leafy vegetables. Food sources of calcium, rather than supplements, remain the first choice to meet calcium needs because they contain nutrients in addition to calcium - some of which may enhance calcium absorption. To add more calcium to your diet:

— drink milk with meals or as a snack;

— toss broccoli, collards or mustard greens into salads;

— make dips and salad dressings with yogurt or cottage cheese;

— add nonfat dry milk to breads, soups, stews and casseroles.

2. Get plenty of weight-bearing exercise. The pushing and pulling on the bones that go along with weight-bearing exercise (such as walking or jogging) lead to denser, stronger bones. Try to exercise 20-30 minutes three to five times a week.

3. Limit smoking and alcohol. Smoking and an excessive intake of alcohol have been linked to bone loss, although the exact mechanisms are unknown.

DOUBLE CHEESE BURGER Deal

Although not raised on a farm, Jacy Clugston began milking cows on a neighboring farm when she was 12. Now 16, Jacy's success with farm work and FFA is steering her toward a career in animal and dairy science.

Teen Prefers Barn Over House Chores

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Jacy Clugston, a petite and vivacious blonde, thinks cows are the neatest.

Since she was 12 years old, Jacy has been milking cows, cleaning the barn, giving cattle injections, and participating in FFA activities. As the state winner in the FFA creed contest, Jacy won a trip to the Kansas FFA convention last year.

If Jacy had been raised on the farm, her activities might have been expected but Jacy wasn't raised on a farm.

"When I was 12, I was babysitting for a little boy who begged me to take him to the barn," Jacy said.

A lover of animals, Jacy admired the cows and spoke with the herdswoman about the animals.

Surprisingly, the herdswoman offered Jacy a job. Thrilled, Jacy begged her mother to let her try it.

The experience changed her life.

"It was the best thing that ever happened to me — I love milking cows," Jacy said.

According to Jacy, Sarah Morgan, the herdswoman, explained the duties, then left Jacy to work on her own.

Soon Jacy could easily handle the milking of 30 cows. She became adept at barn cleaning and giving the cows shots.

"I have a growing interest in vet work," Jacy said. "Sarah taught me a lot about animal husbandry."

Sarah also gave Jacy her first calf, which has now grown to be a cow and produced another calf.

In 1988, Sarah Morgan moved her dairy operation and Jacy began working for the neighboring Balmer Brothers Farm where she and three other women milk 130 cows.

With her interest sparked by her cow-milking job, Jacy decided to take an agriculture education class at Manheim Central High School where she was introduced to the FFA.

"I joined just for the heck of it," Jacy said. "I didn't know what I was getting into."

What Jacy discovered about the FFA excites her. "FFA is one of the best organizations ever. It teaches leadership, cooperation, and offers so many opportunities," she said.

One of those opportunities for Jacy is the speech competition. As a ninth grader, she competed on four different levels to win the state championship in the creed contest. Her victory sent her to the national FFA convention in Kansas City.

Jacy, who claims to have a competitive spirit, likes to excell in everything. She was disappointed that ninth grade state winners weren't given the opportunity to compete on the national level, but she said, "The trip opened my mind to new opportunities and goals."

As a district speech winner in the FFA prepared speaking contest, Jacy hopes her speaking skills will gain another state win for her as the competition continues.

"Winning motivates me to go farther and to try new things."

The thought of not winning isn't completely demoralizing to her. She said, "If I don't win, I believe that God has a purpose for everything and I'll just try harder next time."

Within the next few years, Jacy hopes to try out for the county dairy princess title and for a national FFA office.

Her enthusiasm about FFA equals her dismay at Gov. Casey for cutting FFA funds. She said, "It's like biting the hand that feeds you. He's made a great mistake."

Her ambition is recruiting others to take ag education classes and participate in FFA.

Jacy's interests are not limited to farming. She is a cheerleader, involved in the school musical, takes voice lessons, and sings solos at church functions and school chorus. She is also a member of the National Honor Society.

"I'm ambitious," Jacy said. "I like to push myself to do my best in everything I do."

Jacy has one 10-year-old brother who sums up his sister's activities with the words, "Jacy isn't around much."

Her FFA projects this year include her on-farm experience, a cow, a heifer, and a home-improvement project that includes pool repair, yard maintenance, and landscaping.

Jacy is the daughter of Kenneth and Phyllis Clugston, Manheim. Her father owns Craft-Bilt Construction, which builds agriculture structures.

"Sometimes," Jacy said, "I tell my dad, who had been raised on a farm, that women do a better job at milking cows than men. Women have softer voices and more patience and I think cows respond to that."

Her dad disagrees. He believes cows respond to whoever they get used to milking them.

Regardless, Jacy said, she found that she makes a fine match with cows and she doesn't let them intimidate her because of her small size.

Sixteen-year-old Jacy Clugston helps milk 130 Holsteins on the Balmer Brothers Dairy Farm, Manheim.

Two Women Compete For York Dairy Princess Title

York Co. Correspondent

YORK (York Co.) — Two York County women will compete for the York County dairy princess crown during pageant ceremonies beginning 8 p.m. on Saturday, May 5, at the county 4-H Center at Bair.

A new addition to the pageant will be the selection of a "Dairy Miss" to assist the princess at some dairy promotional events. Three contestants, daughters of county dairy farm families, will take part in the judging.

Contestants for the York dairy princess title are Daisy M. Brenneman, daughter of Nelson and Judy Brenneman, Spring Grove R1, and Angela Lang, daughter of Gloria Shaffer, York R10.

Daisy Brenneman is 18 and a senior at Spring Grove Area High School. She sings with the school's chorus and is treasurer of the home arts club. In addition to helping with milking the family's dairy herd, Daisy is employed as a trainee at Green's Dairy.

A member of the Seven Valleys Fire Company, Daisy also enjoys crafts and sewing projects. Her dairy promotion interest is especially geared toward children and teen-agers. The Brennemans milk a herd of 58 Holstein and Jersey cows on their 116-acre farm.

Angela Lang, 18, is a senior at Southwestern High School. She works at Walnut Valley Farms Lawn and Garden Center, and at Sunnybend Dairy Farm, York, helping with milking, calves and show animals.

A 4-H'er for several years, Angela is a member of the Central Dairy Club and the York 4-H dairy judging team. Also a local, state and national Holstein Association member, she owns and exhibits three registered Holsteins. Because she enjoys children, Angela has a special interest in dairy promotion to elementary-school age groups.

In the running for the dairy miss title are Becky Kilgore, daughter of Doug and Pam Kilgore, Airville; Jessica Pomraning, daughter of Myron and Teresa Pomraning, Delta; and Michelle Walker, daughter of Leroy and Brenda Walker, New Freedom.

Becky Kilgore, 7, is a second-grade student at Clearview Elementary School. She likes to help feed the farm's baby calves and spend time with her five-year-old sister Raechel.

Jessica Pomraning, 8, is a third-grader at Clearview Elementary School and has competed at regional and state level in baton twirling events. She helps with some barn chores and looking after her younger sisters.

Michelle Walker, 7, attends the first grade at Friendship Elementary School. Her chores are helping her mother with the dishes and around the house, and tending Sparky, her puppy.

The new York County dairy princess will atttend a state-wide training seminar in July and represent the county at the state dairy princess pageant in September. Princess and dairy miss contestants will represent York's dairy industry over the next twelve months at local and area public and agricultural events.

Dairy princess events and promotional appearances are sponsored by the York Dairy Promotion Committee and the county's dairy industry. Dairy promotion requests may be directed to committee chairman Sara Eisenhart, Thomasville R1, 259-0908.

Deviled Eggs
6 servings

6 hard-cooked eggs
2 tablespoons mayonnaise, dairy sour cream or plain yogurt
¾ teaspoon prepared mustard
½ teaspoon lemon juice, herb or seasoning blend
¼ teaspoon salt

2. Place remaining ingredients in bag with yolks. Press out air.
3. Close bag. Knead until contents are thoroughly blended.
4. Push contents toward corner. Snip about ½ inch off corner of bag.
5. Squeezing bag gently, fill reserved whites with yolk mixture. Chill to blend flavors.

DEVILED EGGS DELUXE

PA 4-H Teen Leader, Citizenship Retreats

Fourteen Warren County 4-H'ers participated in the N.W. Pennsylvania 4-H teen leader and citizenship retreats recently.

Planning committee members from Warren County for the teen retreat were Chris Carlson and Mark Lauffenburger of Warren; Sonna DeVore of Pittsfield; Michelle Leach and Andy VanOrd of Russell; and Kevin Deeter of Pleasantville.

According to Phyllis Wright, 4-H coordinator, these teens helped conduct workshops on 4-H state and national opportunities, public relations, communications, teaching recreation, and inspirational activities. Younger teens attending were Heather Sleeman of Warren; Kari Button of Russell; and Jolinda Dexter of Pittsfield.

Citizenship retreat is for teens 15 years and older. Attending were Valerie Tarr of Pleasantville; Tracie Baker of Grand Valley; Mindy Landers of Sugar Grove; Myles Schreiber of Russell; and Jennie Jameson of Youngsville. They worked with "Job Express — Preparing for a Career." The program included interviews with employers finding people who can help with careers, getting an edge with a job application, and improving personal marketability.

Robert Orner of Titusville presented a self-esteem program for all teens by being "Freddie the Frog" character.

Chester County 4-H Representatives Meet

In January, the former Chester County 4-H Teen Council adopted a new title: Chester County 4-H Representative Council. This body of countywide 4-H'ers, ages 8-19, meet from 7:30 to 9:00 p.m. on the first Wednesday of every month in the 4-H Office, on the third floor of the Dague Agricultural Building on the corner of North New and West Market Streets in West Chester.

Meetings follow parliamentary procedures. Members discuss who will represent Chester County at county, state, and regional 4-H events such as PAFC Business Seminar (a short study course about cooperatives); camp counselor training and multi-county 4-H weekends; and State, Capitol and Citizenship Focus days. They also plan and hold Summer "Bash," Halloween (for 4-H'ers enjoyment), and Holiday (for entertaining nursing home residents) parties. There is a planned program following each business meeting.

Officers for 1990 are Diane Lynn of Spring City, president; Owen Bewley of West Chester, vice-president; Noel Scheib of Phoenixville, secretary; and Shari Supplee of Glenmoore, treasurer.

1990 Wayne County 4-H Market Lamb Project

The challenge of properly feeding, managing, and keeping records on two market lambs are some of the reasons why the Wayne County 4-H Market Lamb Feeding Project continues to enjoy its popularity with area 4-H members.

Besides feeding, and managing, and keeping good records, the 4-H member also learns how to properly show and fit market lambs for exhibit at the Wayne County Fair.

The 4-H market lamb project will start April 1, when the 4-H member puts two market lambs on feed. Crossbred, wether lambs are recommended for this project but ewe lambs are also permitted. Lambs born in January or February 1990 are suggested for this project.

4-H market lambs must be on feed and under the 4-H member's care by May 1, 1990. At this time the two lambs should weigh around 50 pounds each. Also, all lambs must be castrated (wethers).

On May 3, from 6 to 8:30 p.m., all market lambs must be brought to the fairgrounds to be weighed, eartagged, vaccinated, and given a health check.

The goal of this 4-H market lamb project is to produce a high quality market lamb that weighs between 80 and 130 pounds. To participate in the Wayne County Junior Market Lamb Show and the Junior Livestock Sale, all lambs must weigh at least 80 pounds and not over 130 pounds at the fair check-in.

Growing market lambs, if fed properly, can be expected to gain between .33 and .75 pounds per day. These gains would also depend upon the breed of the market lambs and the management they receive from the 4-H member.

Young, growing market lambs will need good quality concentrate, high-quality hay such as alfalfa-grass mixtures or mostly grass mixtures, salt and minerals, plus a supply of clean, fresh drinking water.

During early summer, the lambs must be shorn. This procedure leaves a short, workable fleece, plus it helps to keep the lambs cooler during the hot summer months. The 4-H market lamb shearing has been tentatively set for Thursday, July 12, 6 to 7 p.m. at the Wayne County Fairgrounds.

Market lambs must also be treated for internal parasites. This procedure helps the lambs to grow properly and make good use of the feeds and forages fed to the lambs.

All of the 4-H market lamb projects are exhibited at the Wayne County Fair Junior Market Lamb Show. The lambs compete in this show based on their bodyweight.

Because of the positive reaction to the in-service fitting event at the 1989 fair, this event will continue as the official junior fitting class. To compete in this class, each member should bring one unfit lamb (washed only). Feet should be trimmed prior to being brought to the fair.

The highlight of this 4-H project occurs when the members sell their market lambs through the Junior Livestock Sale. These high quality market lambs are offered to the highest bidder to be slaughtered and transformed into tasty lamb dinner cuts.

An important step in this 4-H project is to maintain an up-to-date project record book. Expenses and all income derived from this 4-H project are shown in his record book. The 4-H member has an opportunity to see what it costs to successfully grow market lambs.

The Wayne County extension office will try to maintain a list of area sheep producers that have market lambs available for sale.

For additional information about the 4-H market lamb project, contact the Wayne County extension office at 253-5970, extension 239.

Leaders attending from Bucks County were Christine and Donald Dickson, Bud and Connie Schofield, Ruth Torxel, Marilyn Wagner, Carolyn Chester, Sue Colliton, Joni Soost, Jacqueline Smith, and Kathy Kennedy. These volunteers attended the forum to enhance their skills to work with 4-H youth ages 8 to 19.

The April 9, 1990 meeting of the Udders and Others 4-H meeting was held at the Elizabethtown Area Community Center.

The next meeting will be held at Ruby Bollinger's on May 12, 1990, for a showing and fitting workshop.

Presentations and Demonstrations

All 4-H members 8-19 years old are invited to participate in this two-day seminar, June 19 and 26, to develop presentations/demonstrations, to prepare and perform the planned presentation/demonstration to handle questions from an audience, and stage fright.

Included will be preparation and outline of presentations, dates, and fact-finding in preparing speeches and presentations, responding to audience questions, actual performances, and evaluation.

The seminar will be held June 19 and 26 at the 4-H Office, 235 W. Market Street, West Chester from 7:30-9:30 p.m. There is no cost, but registration is required by June 12.

4-H Dairy Goat Day

Try Tofu Cooking

Have you tried tofu? It's a terrific product that will help you create inexpensive, nutritious dishes for your family.

Tofu is a cheese-like product made from soybeans. Because of its mild flavor, tofu combines well with fruits, vegetables, grains, meats, eggs and dairy products. It picks up the flavors of added sauces and spices and is useful as a meat extender.

Tofu is highly digestible, low in calories, and is an excellent, inexpensive source of calcium. It also is a heart healthy product; it's cholesterol free and contains polyunsaturated fat.

Although rich in plant protein, tofu lacks some of the essential amino acids not made by the human body. It needs to be eaten with rice or other grains, milk products, or small amounts of meat or eggs to provide good quality protein.

There are two types of tofu - soft and firm. Soft tofu contains more water allowing it to be easily blended or creamed. Firm tofu contains less water and should be used in recipes that call for tofu to hold its shape. Either type can be used when the recipe specifies crumbles, mashed, or creamed tofu.

Tofu is sold as a water-covered cube sealed inside plastic containers or shelf stable containers in the produce section or the dairy case. Tofu packed in water is safe to use if you plan to cook it, as cooking kills most microorganisms.

When selecting tofu, examine the package to see that there are no holes, and buy only undamaged packages. Loss of water will lead to spoilage. Some packages may indicate a pull date. Choose those marked with the latest date to ensure freshness.

Tofu usually contains no preservatives and is perishable. When you bring it home, open the package and wash the tofu. Store covered with water in a plastic container with a lid. Make sure that about a half inch of water extends over the top of the tofu. Change the water every couple of days and tofu will keep for two weeks.

Tofu can be frozen. Simply drain off the water and wrap in foil or plastic. When defrosting it, cover with lukewarm water for a couple of hours. Squeeze out the excess and use immediately. Freezing changes the creamy consistency to a coarse, meaty texture that soaks up marinades and sauces easily.

Touf can be used in many ways. Try:

* Cubing or crumbling and adding to soups 10 minutes before done.

* Cubing or crumbling and adding to cold salads. Tofu absorbs dressing flavor after several hours and becomes quite tasty.

* Crumbling and adding to scrambling eggs.

* Stir-frying with onions, garlic, and assorted vegetables. Serve over rice.

Lasagna

10 ounces tofu, drained
½ cup grated Parmesan cheese
1 to 2 cloves garlic, crushed
½ lb. mushrooms, sliced
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
1 lb. lasagna noodles
¼ cup chopped fresh parsley or 1 tablespoon dried
2 to 2½ cups canned tomato sauce
2 cups grated part-skim mozzarella cheese

Cook the lasagna noodles in boiling water with a teaspoon of vegetable oil until just tender. Drain. Saute the mushrooms in the oil until tender. Mash the tofu in a bowl and mix with Parmesan cheese and garlic. Have the cooked mushrooms, parsley, tomato sauce, and grated cheese ready for assembly.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees F. Lightly oil an 8½ by 11 inch baking pan. Line bottom of baking pan with a layer of noodles. Spread the noodle layer with half the tofu mixture, then half the mushrooms, half the parsley, about ½ cup of sauce, and one-third the grated cheese. Add another layer of noodles and repeat the process. Place noodles on top, sprinkle with remaining grated cheese, and top with remaining tomato sauce. Bake for 45 minutes or until nicely browned. Serves 10.

Sticky Dip

1 cup tofu, squeezed to remove excess water*
½ cup water-packed tuna (white, preferably solid-packed), drained
1 cup chopped fresh spinach (or thawed frozen that is well drained)
1 teaspoon chopped fresh dill or ½ teaspoon dried dill weed (to taste)
1 clove garlic, pressed
2 scallions minced
2 teaspoons frozen apple juice concentrate, thawed
1 teaspoon apple cider vinegar

In a mixing bowl, blend together the tofu, mayonnaise, and tuna, breaking up the chunks of tuna to make a relatively smooth mixture. Add the remaining ingredients and blend together thoroughly. Cover the bowl and refrigerate for one hour. Serve with crackers or fresh vegetables. Makes 2 cups.

* To squeeze, drain the tofu and wrap in a towel. Twist the towel closed and squeeze or knead the tofu for 2-3 minutes, taking care not to press so vigorously that the tofu begins to come through the towl. Empty into a bowl for use.

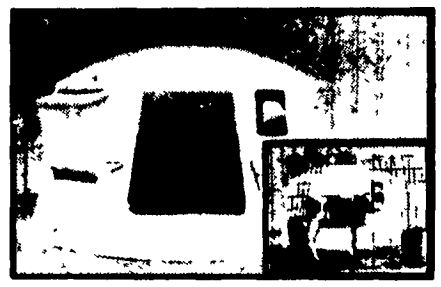
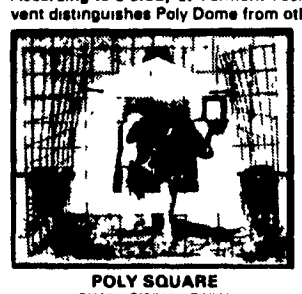
Poly Dome Means Healthier Calves.
All-Season



POLY DOME 60 (H) x 86 (D)

Raising calves is no easy chore! But dairymen everywhere have discovered the benefits of raising their calves in Poly Dome Calf Nurseries. In fact, Poly Dome is the first choice of dairy farmers throughout the United States and Canada. After comparing Poly Dome Calf Nurseries with modified wooden hutches, the University of Minnesota-Morris found that Poly Dome calves were healthier and grew faster than calves kept in wooden huts. And Poly Dome is now being tested at several universities across the country with similar results.

According to a study at Vermont Technical College, this rotatable air vent distinguishes Poly Dome from other huts on the market.



POLY SQUARE

MINI DOME

DON'T ELIMINATE PROFITS!
Poly Dome will help put money back into your pocket faster. Why risk burnt lungs, frozen ears and tails? Poly Dome will help eliminate ammonia build-up. Your calves will be healthier and they'll grow faster. Your heifers will be part of your money-making milking herd sooner. And with three different dome styles to choose from, you can select the one that works best for you-- Poly Dome, Poly Square or Mini Dome.

CONSTRUCTED FOR YEARS OF MAINTENANCE-FREE SERVICE.

You'll get more out of an Eby aluminum grain body. Lightweight and rugged aluminum provides rigid, fuel-efficient support to fill your grain hauling needs.

Eby packs years of experience, workmanship and performance into every aluminum body it manufactures. And special Eby options let you customize your body to your individual operation. Available in standard lengths, each unit is designed to provide you with an investment in durable performance and practical economy.

Look over these outstanding features.

- Less weight. Eby aluminum bodies weigh up to 30% less than comparable steel and wood construction.
- Less maintenance. Aluminum construction won't rust or rot - never needs painting.
- Long-life durability. Heavy-duty structural components and hollow-tube frame combine with aluminum floor and sides to stand up to years of hard work.

Got Grain? Then get the trailer that is Timpte tough... the Super Hopper. It's not only built to take it...it's also built to cut fuel costs. The Super Hopper is lightweight and aerodynamically designed to reduce wind drag. When there's grain to be hauled, Timpte does the haulin' best and pulls a lot easier than the rest.

Get outstanding value in EVERY Eby trailer.

Whether it's a top-of-the-line Ruff Neck or an economical Wrangler, you know your livestock trailer is built to last if it's from Eby.

Aluminum construction is one of the main reasons these trailers are so durable and reliable. They'll never rust through or need welding. In fact, without ever being painted, an Eby livestock trailer will stay looking new for years.

Standard features make your Eby trailer a profitable investment. Extra-heavy axles, brakes, wheels and tires. Thick aluminum sheet flooring. Sturdy posts and rails. Even an aerodynamically designed front end is standard.

And, while standard features make even the economical Eby Wrangler far more than an average economy-model, we custom-build everything we make. So you tell us what you want. Choose from a long list of options. Select those features you need for your particular operation. Whether it's a Wrangler or deluxe Ruff Neck, the trailer you buy will be the trailer you need.

Ag Students Win Speaking Contest

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Six Penn State students received cash awards for their presentations in the annual Guldin Speaking Contest, which provides a forum for undergraduate students to present short, research-based addresses on key issues in their major area of study.

The Guldin Speaking Contest is sponsored by the Coaly Society, an honor society for students in agriculture, and is made possible by funds donated in memory of Paul R. Guldin, an agricultural leader and poultry farmer from Berks County.

First place went to Mary Ann Keith, daughter of Harry and Joan Keith of Entriken. In her presentation "BST: To Be or Not To Be," Keith examined myths and facts surrounding the bovine growth hormone controversy and then explored the potential effect hormone use or nonuse could have on small and large farmers, consumers, and livestock. Keith is a senior majoring in dairy and animal science.

Second place went to Thomas Mitchell, son of Ken and Collette Mitchell of Baltimore, MD. Mitchell, a sophomore majoring in plant science, discussed the use of biological controls of insect pests as an alternative to chemical pesticides.

Third place went to Michelle Swope, daughter of Clarence and Margaret Swope of Bernville. Her presentation, "A Diverse Forest," focused on the wide range of learning opportunities and research projects in Penn State's College of Agriculture. Swope is a junior majoring in agricultural science.

Fourth place went to Karen Fessler, daughter of Glenn and Joan Fessler of Robesonia. Her address, "Agricultural Education: The Key to Success," concerned the opportunities and challenges open to students in agriculture. Fessler is a freshman majoring in dairy and animal science.

Fifth ploace prizes went to Lisa Overly, daughter of Tom and Hedy Overly of Littlestown, and Christina White, daughter of Terry and Lillian White of Bethel Park. Overly, a senior majoring in food science, spoke about heightened consumer awareness of food safety issues. White, a sophomore majoring in agricultural economics, stressed the urgency of providing enough food to feed the world population and discussed alternative production methods such as aquaculture, hydroponics, and land expansion.

Preliminary rounds of the contest were judged by Madeleine Sigman, assistant professor of food science; Diana Lynn Cox-Foster, assistant professor of entomology; and Eston Martz, feature news editor for Agricultural Information Services.

Finalists were judged by Gabriella Varga, assistant professor of animal science; Lloyd Dell, graduate assistant in agricultural education; and Larry Kassab, a speech consultant for executives and management personnel in the business community.

ASA Schedules Eastern Regional Classic

BOZEMAN, Mont. — The American Simmental Association's (ASA) Eastern Regional Classic will be held June 12-15 in Washington, Pennsylvania.

The Eastern Region encompasses the States of Indiana, Ohio, Michigan, Kentucky, Virginia, West Vitginia, Maryland, New York, and all of New England. An estimated 90 to 100 ASA junior members from those states are expected to participate.

Headquarters hotel for the event is the Holiday Inn in Washington, while all cattle activities will be held at the Washington County Fairgrounds. Ernie Moore of the West Virginia Simmental Association is handling overall coordination.

Regional Classics are patterned after ASA's National Classic, placing special emphasis on learning through a wide range of beef-related activities. Four other Regional Classics are being held around the U.S. — The South-Central is June 8-10 at Arlington, Texas; the Western is June 14-16 in Pullman, Washington; the Southeastern is June 21-23 at Carrollton, Georgia; and the North-Central is June 21-23 at Rochester, Minnesota. The National Summer Classic is scheduled for Terre Haute, Indiana on July 8-12.

The schedule includes a sire summary quiz, a herdsman quiz, beef bowl competition, livestock judging, a heifer sales talk, public speaking, heifer competition, and showmanship. In addition, extracurricular activities such as social events and beef cookouts are planned.

"The American Simmental Association's junior program is unique in the livestock industry," said ASA Executive Vice-President Earl B. Peterson. "Each of our competitive events has equal impact toward the overall and team awards. The format requires that an individual be very well-rounded if they are to be successful."

Deadline for entering the Eastern Regional Classic is May 10, 1990. For more information, contact ASA, (800) 548-0205.

New Market Opportunities For Corn, Soybeans

RACINE, Wisc. — Take a trip down Main Street, U.S.A. Stop at the gas station, the print shop, the supermarket, the auto dealer, the paint store or the convenience store. Chances are, although you won't see corn or soybeans inside the doors of any of these businesses, these commodities are there.

They're present in the form of ethanol fuels, as the sweetener in soft drinks, in newspaper ink, in garbage bags and in cooking oil, food and other products. Industrial and food uses of these by-products now consume nearly a billion bushels of corn per year, and an equally impressive amount of soybean oil, as well.

The new uses supplement corn and soybeans' traditional role as components of livestock feed. They also represent the "new wave" of market development activities being conducted by groups such as the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) and the American Soybean Association (ASA).

"The ASA is currently emphasizing three major project areas in the United States to increase soybean usage," said Scott Stone, state services manager from the domestic marketing department of the St. Louis-based soybean group. "These include the areas of soy oil ink, dust reduction in livestock feed and promoting soybean oil as a healthy oil through the truth-in-labeling campaign."

NCGA is working on a number of market development areas, including ethanol, degradable plastics and corn sweeteners. Other possible new uses include encapsulated pesticides and carbon black in tires. Of these, according to John Campen, director of market development with the association, ethanol represents one of the largest growth markets, while other projects -- such as degradable garbage bags -- also could develop into significant usage of corn.

Ethanol — Regaining Interest

In the late 1970s, the American public was introduced to gasohol, a blend of ethyl alcohol (ethanol) and gasoline. Interest in the fuel mainly stemmed from oil shortages and high gasoline prices which prevailed at the time, and some 10 million bushels of corn were utilized for ethanol production in 1978.

According to the Renewable Fuels Association, in 1987 an estimated 350 million bushels of corn were used to produce nearly 900 million gallons of ethanol. This usage added about 10 cents to the per-bushel corn price during the year.

"Ethanol is currently building market share because of strength in a few important areas," Campen said. "It's an effective source of octane enhancement, it's environmentally superior to hydrocarbon fuels and it reduces U.S. dependence on foreign oil." The potential for the product in terms of the amount of corn it would use is staggering.

One of the newest areas of emphasis among corn interests is in degradable plastics, products which could develop into a 300-million-bushel market for corn in the forseeable future, according to Campen.

Mixing starch into plastic is now a major project at the Whistler Center for Carbohydrate Research at Purdue University. Currently, researchers are using a 6 percent starch level in plastic polymers, but that level could rise to 20 percent if research is successful.

Cornstarch — More New Uses

Starched-based processes from USDA research labs are leading to a number of additional new uses for corn, according to Dr. William M. Doane, of the Agricultural Research Service in Peoria, Ill. Some of these include slow-release pesticides, seed coatings and soil stabilizers.

"By inventing new processes for starch, a commodity that sells for about 10 cents per pound, we're endeavoring to add value to it and perhaps improve farming efficiency," he said.

According to Doane, an agency invention from the mid-1970s -- called "Super Slurper," a starch derivative that absorbs 1,400 times its weight in moisture -- is still finding new commercial uses.

He and colleagues invented Super Slurper in 1974, and today it's used in body powder, diapers, as an electrical conductor in batteries and in medical and recreational cold packs. It's also used in filters for removing moisture from fuel tanks, and in a slurry to prevent roots of small transplanted trees from dying.

Dr. Robert Wing, one of Doane's colleagues at the Peoria research center, is equally enthused about the possibilities represented by another use for

Maryland Man Distinguished By Jersey Cattle Club

REYNOLDSBURG, Ohio — The American Jersey Cattle Club (AJCC) recently announced that Dr. H. Duane Norman, Fulton, Md., will be honored as the recipient of the AJCC Distinguished Service Award. The award will be presented to Norman during the organization's 122nd Annual Meeting in Boise, Idaho, on June 22.

This prestigious award is bestowed upon a member of The American Jersey Cattle Club who has rendered unselfish service for many years and, in doing so, made a notable contribution to the advancement of the Jersey breed in the United States.

Dr. Norman's association with the Jersey breed is a long and successful tale. Born and raised on a Jersey farm established by his grandfather in Liberty, Pa., Norman was extensively involved in 4-H and judging contests. He received his bachelor's and master's degrees from The Pennsylvania State University and completed his doctorate under Dr. L.D. Van Vleck at Cornell University.

Norman joined the staff at the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA), Beltsville, Md. in 1970. Today he is the Research Leader at the Animal Improvement Programs Laboratory. During his career he has contributed to the advancement of the Jersey breed in his research program as well as during off-duty time. He has worked with The American Jersey Cattle Club in many areas of genetic advancement and type evaluation and has made personal contributions to many Jersey breeders.

Dr. Norman's research contributions and role in adoption of sound programs by the USDA and The American Jersey Cattle Club have resulted in his having an extraordinary influence in the last 15 years on increasing the annual rate of genetic improvement for U.S. dairy cattle. He has been in the forefront of many of the positive changes in the Jersey breed and dairy industry as a whole. He developed procedures used by the U.S. dairy cattle industry between 1974 and 1989 to rank bulls and cows for yield traits. He was also responsible for developing procedures currently used to rank dairy cattle for linear type traits and indexes that combine production and type.

His influence on the dairy industry has been far-reaching. He has played a key role in increasing awareness of the value of protein in milk pricing. This interest was put into action through his development of predicted transmitting ability dollars (PTA$), PTA$ protein, and PTA$ cheese.

Norman had the foresight to see that protein would be an important trait for the future and initiated a sire evaluation procedure for protein and solids-not-fat in 1977. Availability and utilization of genetic information for protein in breeding decisions was one of several stimuli that started a revolution in milk pricing to include payment for protein. Availability of protein information has also increased international sale of U.S. cattle, embryos, and semen.

Norman was primarily responsible for formulation of the Modified Contemporary Comparison (MCC) in 1971. The MCC was used in the United States until 1989 for producing Predicted Differences and Cow Indexes for milk and fat yields.

Implementation of MCC eliminated biases present in the previous USDA Herdmate Comparison sire evaluation. Elimination of these biases permitted comparison of bulls across time regardless of where or when they were progeny tested. These improvements contributed to increased accuracy of sire evaluations.

Norman is an active member of both the Pennsylvania and Maryland Jersey Cattle Clubs. He serves as a screening and ranking advisor in sire selection for Liberty Jersey Sires Inc. and currently serves as chairman of the commercial exhibits for the AJCC-NAJ Annual Meetings scheduled for Hagerstown, Md., in 1991. He serves as a director to the Maryland Jersey Cattle Club.

In addition to his state involvement in Jersey activities, Norman is a member of the AJCC Research Advisory Committee and the AJCC Research Committee. He initiated a research project to exchange Jersey semen between the United States and Denmark to evaluate relative efficiency of strains.

Norman has generously given his personal time to the increased awareness and the genetic advancement of the dairy industry. His contributions are lasting and, even in his early career, have been far-reaching. He has unselfishly contributed to the betterment of the Jersey cow and Jersey breeders throughout the United States and the world.

Stemler Wins Service Award

MADISON, Wis. — Walter Stemler, Waterloo, Illinois, was this year's recipient of the Livestock Conservation Institute (LCI) Meritorius Service Award, in recognition of this more than 40 years of service and commitment to the dairy industry and his work in the area of animal health.

Stemler was presented the award by John H. Lang, president and C.E.O. of LCI, at the banquet of the LCI annual meeting held April 3-5, 1990 in Louisville, Kentucky.

Stemler served on the board of directors of the St. Louis division of Mid-America Dairymen for 40 consecutive years.

Some of his accomplishments in the area of animal health include work in the areas of brucellosis and mastitis. Stemler was responsible for setting up and chairing a task force committee to develop a five-year plan to eradicate brucellosis and has served as a board member of the National Mastitis Council.

He began farming in 1945 and retired in 1989 when his daughter and son-in-law took over the management of the farming operation. They currently milk 150 cows and farm more than 1,000 acres of land.

New Market Opportunities

cornstarch, in the form of encapsulated, slow-release pesticides.

"If a pesticide is encapsulated in starch, farmers or gardeners can apply less of the pest-killing chemical than if they used a spray or powder," he said. "The starch-based granules would be safer to handle than a concentrate that has to be diluted before being applied."

Inking The Presses With Soy Oil

A market for up to 30 million bushels of soybeans per year holds promise in the form of soybean oil ink, a relatively new technology which more than 500 newspapers across the country new employ, according to ASA's Stone.

Currently, about 70 percent of all news ink is made from a petroleum carrier which soybean oil can replace, and improve, he said.

According to George Cashau, director of research for the American Newspaper Publisher's Association, soy oil ink is fast becoming the standard for color newspaper reproduction.

Colorful, eye-catching front pages are becoming a competitive necessity in the daily war of rack sales, and soy color inks have proven to be a cost-effective tool in producing the brightest colors for newsprint. The product also has lower "rub-off" characteristics, is environmentally safer and has renewable resource qualities.

Dust Control, Feed Application

Additional new applications for soybean oil, lie in the area of controlling dust in grain handling facilities and in livestock feed, Stone said.

Airborne dust in grain elevators presents fire and explosion hazards. Also, each time a ton of grain is handled, about three pounds of grain dust is lost, causing a monetary loss in addition to the hazards involved.

With the new soybean oil dust suppression method, dust is prevented from becoming airborne, according to ASA. Costs for the oil used to treat the grain (it takes about five ounces of oil per ton of grain) are usually recovered through the reduction in shrinkage.

In the area of reducing dust present in livestock feed, the resulting benefits include a more healthy environment for people and livestock, and added energy in rations at a cost as low as $5 per ton, depending on the market price.

The nationwide drought which occurred during the 1988 growing season brought with it higher commodity prices and a reduction in the burdensome grain stock situation in the United States. As a result, some may question the reasoning behind continuing to search for new alternative uses for corn and soybeans.

According to NCGA's Campen, "I think that a year like 1988 has awakened many people about the fact that commodity supplies can be very volatile. In the case of corn, stocks got out of hand over the past several years, and all it takes is a year like this to bring things back into perspective.

"However, a normal or bumper crop year in 1989 could change the scenario again very quickly," he said. "Our members now are sensitive to the fact that long-term success is dependent upon ongoing utilization research and market development."

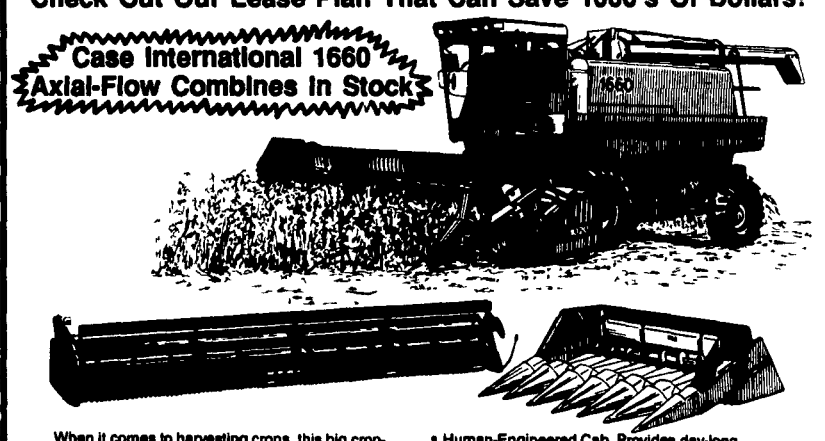
Case International 1660 Axial-Flow Combines In Stock



When it comes to harvesting crops, this big crop-saver can save more grain than other combines in its size class. It has the muscle to "get in and get out" fast to make the most of each day of good harvesting weather. It consistently turns out cleaner grain so you can get top market price. Put a 1660 to work and take advantage of these field-proven features.

- Axial-Flow Design. Uses a single rotor with fewer moving parts and fewer problems than conventional combines using the cylinder-and-concave design. Its more gentle threshing action means less cracked grain and top price for every bushel.
- Human-Engineered Cab. Provides day-long comfort for increased operator productivity.
- 180 hp Turbocharged Diesel and 3-Speed Hydrostatic Transmission. Plenty of power to handle soft soils and hilly terrain.
- 1015 Pickup Header. Available in 11- and 13-foot widths. Hydraulic variable speed drive lets you match crop pickup to ground speed for smooth delivery with minimum shattering.
- 1010 Rigid and 1020 Flexible Cutterbar Direct Cut Headers also available in several widths from 15 to 30 feet depending on model.
- 1000 Series Corn Heads in four to eight row sizes.

ADJA FOAM MARKER

A long lasting Foam Marking System that leaves highly visible strips or balls of foam. The ADJA Foam Marker is a new concept in foam generation which eliminates the need for compressors, pumps, or solution tanks, etc.

The simplicity and reliability of this state-of-the-art marker make it the most reasonably priced marking system presently available to the farming community.

Simple electronic controls allow in-cab control of on-off switch, left or right marking, foam mark size, and distance between marks. The ADJA Foam Marker is ideal for use on a variety of surfaces such as summerfallow, stubble, cultivated or disced stubble, green crops, green grass or brown grass. A totally new formula produces foam that will last for one full day or more.

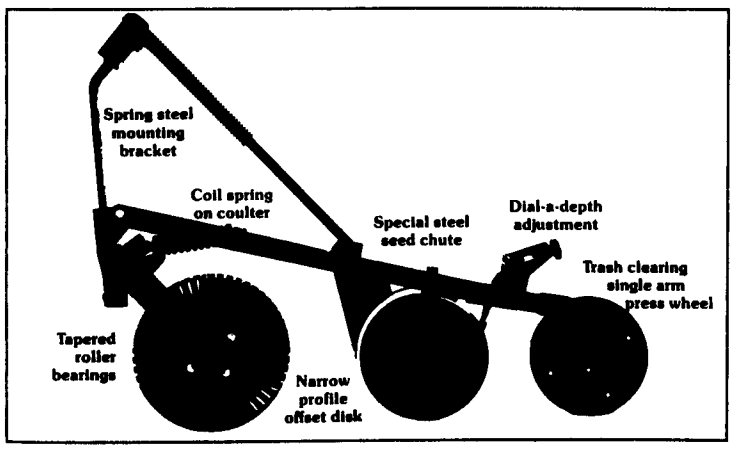
You Won't Find A Better No-Till Drill Than GREAT PLAINS

Great Plains Solid Stand no-till drills have the planting accuracy drilled soybeans need;
(1) Depth-Gauging Press Wheels keep the opener from penetrating too deep; planting depth can be quickly changed with exclusive dial-a-depth adjustment system.
(2) The spring-loaded coulters offer up to 400 lbs. per row of down-pressure, ensuring that they open a groove in even the toughest residue and soil. Each coulter is integrated with its opener and press wheel arm so that coulters and openers are close enough for good tracking but separated to allow good trash flow.
(3) A spring steel mounting bar allows the entire planting system to flex with the terrain, for even more flexibility for the coulter and opener assembly.
(4) The double-disk openers and coulters flex independently to pass over stones easily. A sturdy down-pressure spring with 56 lbs. of pressure per inch holds the opener firmly in the groove.



THE NO-TILL DRILL THAT WORKS

Here's why:
The end wheel-opener alignment means that the openers neither gouge the soil nor leave the ground when traversing rolling ground; they simply follow the terrain right with the end wheels. The end wheels also act as stabilizers to hold the openers steady when seeding on slopes. By keeping the ground-working components well protected within the profile of the end wheels, the operating costs are low on our Solid Stand No-Till Drill.

Their versatility, their residue clearance, and their compact design make these drills a natural choice. Their narrow widths make them perfect for narrow roads and gates.

Even with all these outstanding no-till capabilities, these drills are well-suited to conventional seeding as well. And of course they have the same great opener and press wheel system offered by all Great Plains Solid Stand drills.

GET THE EXTRA EDGE

Put a Vicon three-bladed disc mower conditioner through wet, heavy, tangled crops. Then compare the difference.

With almost double the number of cuts per minute over two-bladed disc competitiors, and six times the cuts per minute over sicklebar systems, it's easy to understand the clean, fast, NO PLUG performance of Vicon KM disc mower conditioners.

Add the extra suction created by Vicon's unique triangular discs, the full swivel hitch that lets you cut square corners on the move, and gentle, full width conditioning, and you're looking at a high capacity machine that puts productivity in a whole new dimension Four models cut from 7' to 10'6" widths.

Vicon's got the edge. The extra edge.

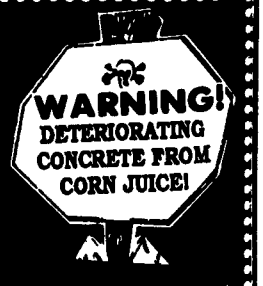
WARNING, ALL SILO OWNERS
Check Your Silo Now For Rotten Staves. If You Have Been Using Your Silo For 10 To 15 Years For Either Corn Silage Or Haylage, It Is Time To SHOTCRETE.



If you have a 15 year old silo... get it fixed or insure it better! But don't wait until the last minute to have it repaired because we may not be able to fix it if you wait too long.
REMEMBER your silo will not fall over when it's empty - it will fall over when it's full. It cannot stand on deteriorated concrete...

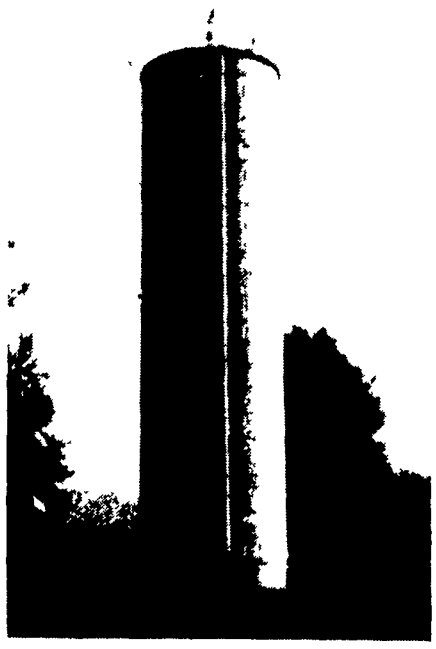
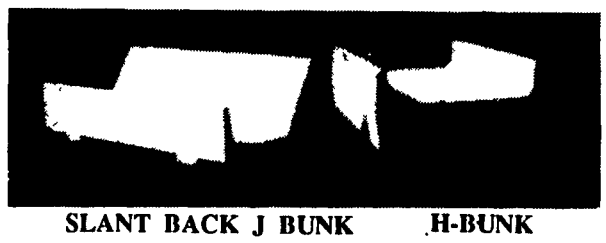
"Consider The Concrete Advantages"

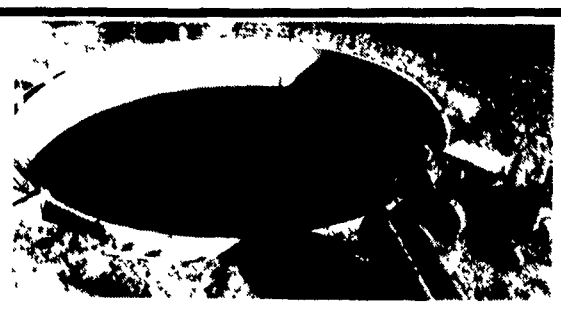


The best storage system for high moisture cob corn is a poured concrete SOLLENBERGER SILO, with bottom unloading. The feed can be safely stored at less than 30% moisture, air is effectively excluded limiting mold growth, the silo is equipped with a distributor to keep separation to a minimum which means more efficient unloading and consistent ration. The 6" solid concrete wall reflects heat meaning that heat damage is minimized and feed is kept cooler. Now Is "Decision Time". Make Plans Now To Have Your Sollenberger Silo Erected In Time To Store Your High Moisture Ground Ear Corn.



SLANT BACK J BUNK H-BUNK

Let Us Know Your Needs. We Can Deliver From Our Large Inventory And Set On Your Prepared Site. OR: We Can Load On Your Truck To Help Save On Freight Costs. We Have Several Sizes And Styles To Choose From, Plus Metal Posts, For Cable, Which Can Be Bolted To The Bunk To Keep Cattle Out.



MANURE STORAGE SYSTEMS

- Manure Storage Systems For The Small Herd - or The 400 Cow Herds And Larger.
- Systems Adaptable To Any Type Equipment
- SCS Approved
- Circular Tanks Poured-In-Place Above Ground - In Ground - Or Uneven Backfill.
- Pre-Cast Concrete panels Delivered And Set On Your Prepared Site.

CONSIDER THE ADVANTAGES OF HIGH MOISTURE EAR CORN

Farmers who use ground shelled corn rather than ground ear corn when putting up high moisture corn (HMC) are not only leaving the cob in the field, but they are leaving at least $150. worth of milk per acre of corn in the field.

These remarks were made by Dr. Howard Larson, noted Mid-Western dairy nutritionist and management specialist.

Further comments based upon years of research included:

* Any amount of cob is better than none.
* It is not economically feasible nor best for the cow to feed high moisture shelled corn.
* It is not necessary to feed hay to dairy cows.

When cob is included with the grian, you not only get an extra 10 to 12 percent HMC by weight, but you get better digestibility in your cows. By adding the cob to the ration, you keep a floor of fiber under the total ration and fiber can supply a lot of energy; and you get better rumen action.

PRE-CAST BUNKER SILOS

Formulating a successful diet for the weanling pig is a challenge. Newly weaned must undergo a lot of difficult changes — social, environmental, immunological, not to mention dietary.

It should come as no surprise that young pigs often perform poorly for a week or two following weaning. But we're slowly beginning to understand the dietary needs of the baby pig. We know that simple corn-soy diets will not do the job, even if all the nutrients are present. We know that milk products and fish meal are important. And we've discovered that additional ingredients like copper sulfate and antibiotics improve performance.

The first challenge a producer faces in the weaning process, particularly with 3-week old pigs pigs, is low feed intake. The result is "post-weaning check" — little or no weight gain for the first two weeks following weaning. It's during these first two weeks that a pig must begin to eat much larger quantities of dry feed than ever before. That requires a diet that's palatable and easily digested.

Once the pig is through the first week or two, he is accustomed to the feeder, the facilities, and his pen mates. He's beginning to secrete enzymes to digest plant products. And his immune system is more highly developed. These changes mean that the producer can simplify the diet, which reduces the cost without sacrificing performance. Two weeks later he can simplify the diet further, to a corn-soybean meal mixture fortified with vitamins and minerals. The suggested diets below list dietary requirements and formulations by age group — 3 to 4 weeks, 4 to 6 weeks, and 6 to 9 weeks. By 9 weeks of age, the pigs should weigh at least 45 pounds and be ready for the grower facility.

(Much of the information in this article is based on research conducted at Kansas State University by Dr. Jim Nelssen and at North Carolina State University by Dr. Evan Jones.)

Lysine (Protein). Three- to four-week-old pigs need 1.3 to 1.4 percent lysine (20 to 24 percent protein, depending on ingredients used). The requirement for 4 to 6 week old pigs is 1.25 percent (18 to 20 percent depending on ingredients).

For 6 to 9 week old pigs, the requirement is about 1.00 percent lysine (for most diets about 18 percent protein). Feeding lysine levels under these values will slow growth rate and decrease feed efficiency.

Milk Products. Milk products have improved pig performance in numerous experiments. Both dried whey and skim milk improve performance over a simple corn soybean meal diet, with dried whey showing a slight advantage. It's important to use edible grade whey for the best results. The milk products undoubtedly exert their effect by increasing both the digestibility and palatability of the ration. For pigs less than 4 weeks of age, use at least 30 percent milk products. Pigs 4 to 6 weeks of age need smaller amounts of milk products (10 to 15 percent). By 6 weeks of age, they can normally be removed entirely.

Fish Meal. Fish meal seems to slow the rate that feed passes through the digestive tract, which helps improve protein digestibility. Its addition to diets for 3-week old pigs is an economical one, and may be helpful for pigs up to 6 weeks of age. Two to four percent added fish meal appears to be the ideal level.

Medication. A broad spectrum antibiotic added at a therapeutic dose is nearly always a good investment for starter pigs. Adding low levels of antibiotics (subtherapeutic, growth promotant level) will help performance, but they won't control disease, which is often a problem with young pigs. Check with your veterinarian for recommendations.

Copper Sulfate. An inexpensive feed additive that works well even in the presence of antibiotics is copper sulfate. Two pounds per ton will provide 250 ppm of elemental copper.

Pelleting. Diets should be pelleted for starter pigs whenever possible. This is especially true for pigs under 6 weeks of age. Optimum pellet diameter appears to be 1/8 inch.

Fat. Although many nutritionists recommend the addition of fat to starter diets, it's difficult to find much research to demonstrate a clear benefit. If you add fat to the diet, include no more than 2 1/2 percent (50 pounds added fat per ton of feed).

Crystalline Lysine-HCl. Limited research has shown that high concentrations of soybean meal has a detrimental effect on the small intestine in the young pig. Alternate protein sources such as milk products and fish meal help to reduce the need for soybean meal. However, lysine-HCl can be used to further reduce the amount of soybean meal. Three and one-half pounds of lysine-HCl plus 96.5 pounds of corn can be used to replace 100 pounds of soybean meal.

Summary

1. Use a complex diet for 3 to 4-week old pigs. It should include at least 30 percent milk products and 2 to 3 percent fish meal.
2. As pigs begin to consume feed (usually within a week of weaning), reduce the amount of milk products. By 6 weeks of age, a simple corn soybean meal will normally be adequate.
3. Use a broad spectrum antibiotic.
4. Include copper sulfate and pellet the diet if practical.
5. If available, use lysine-HCL to reduce the amount of soybean meal in the diet.

N.E. Dairy Farm Beautification Program Holds Meeting

CLARKS SUMMIT (Lackawanna Co.) — The Annual Meeting of the Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program was held March 23, 1990 at the Ramada Inn.

President William Underwood reported that the North East Dairy Farm Beautification Program is "alive and well." He is proud of the accomplishments of the organization and reported he has been approached with inquiries from Vermont and also the poultry people.

Secretary Helen Fountain reported that state officers and regional chairpeople are carrying most of the correspondence. In 1989-90, a new brochure has been designed and 2,000 copies printed for distribution in 1990. Also:

- 250 new signs have been purchased for our new awardees and replacements where needed;
- The NEDFBP booklet was developed and shared with all directors and regional chairs. Included are the by-laws, forms, calendar, and minutes of organization meeting.

The treasurer's report was reviewed:

- Financial Report of the NEDFBP showing sources and withdrawal of 1989 funds.
- Financial summary indicating total income as $22,199.88; total expenses as $16,396.45; and balance as of December 31, 1989, as $5,803.43. This includes the monies received and disbursed in all the state and regional treasuries.
- As of December 31, 1989, 630 Dairy of Distinction signs were on farms; 84 signs were in inventory.

Discussion included strategy to fund NEDFBP:

- Tap corporate headquarters of businesses that dairy industry uses.
- Establish plan for contacts and yearly sponsorship to continue "not for profit" organization. Presently, the New York Dairy Promotion Board (through ADA) is sponsoring NEDFBP with $8,000 per year.
- President Underwood has directed a committee to study funding.

Dan Baker reported for the Pennsylvania division. Eighty-six Dairy of Distinction awards were given in 1989; 174 are in place.

Jay Ricker reported that New Jersey has 19-24 signs out. All dairy farms will receive a brochure and application.

There are 456 New York dairy farms with Dairy of Distinction signs. William Gallamore was recognized as the New York Person of Distinction.

Student Ag Day At U. of Md.

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Student Ag Day — one of the longest-running annual events of its kind in the nation — is set for Saturday, April 28, at the University of Maryland.

Faced with sloppy grounds in recent years, Ag Day planners will reschedule this year's event on Sunday, April 29, in case of a Saturday rain-out.

Activities will run from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. outside the livestock barns and on the green adjacent to the nearby tennis courts.

The public is invited to a family outing. There is no admission charge.

There'll be an all-day petting zoo to help acquaint city children with farm animals; bedding plants for sale to home grounds beautifiers; and horsemanship demonstrations every half hour from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Country and western music will be provided by a live band at intervals throughout the day, beginning at 11 a.m. It will alternate with recorded square dance music and a live square dance caller. Ag Day T-shirts and refreshments will be on sale throughout the day.

During the morning program, College of Agriculture students will compete in fitting and showing competition using pigs, sheep, horses, steers and dairy cows from the University of Maryland herd.

The contestants come mostly from nonfarm backgrounds with no previous show-ring experience. Those involved in the dairy show — the largest of the day — are students enrolled in a course on dairy production. .

By 3 p.m., the winners in each class of livestock will be exchanging animals to determine the honor of best overall showman.

The late-April event is sponsored each year by the Agriculture Student Council at the University of Maryland, with cooperation from other student organizations in the College of Agriculture. Planning committee chairperson is Mary Lou Miner of Waldorf, Charles County, an animal sciences senior. Miner is vice president of the Ag Student Council.

Dr. Jerry V. DeBarthe, associate professor of animal sciences at the University of Maryland, is a longtime advisor to the Ag Student Council. He sees the Ag Day fitting and showing competition as an opportunity for participants to acquire something more than textbook knowledge about the care and handling of farm animals.

The event also provides leadership training opportunities for students involved with its planning and execution.

"In addition, Ag Days — in an urban setting like College Park — gives both student participants and those who attend a chance to experience the atmosphere and traditions of a country fair," DeBarthe said.

ANIMAL RIGHTS AND THE POULTRY PRODUCER

John H. Schwartz
Multi-County Poultry Agent

The animal rights movement is gaining momentum.

This is evident by the increased number of ads, news releases, organized protests, and acts of vandalism by various animal rights groups. In addition, more schools are offering courses based on information supplied by animal rights groups.

The animal rights movement opposes any use of animals by humans. They believe it is wrong to use animals for research, food, pets, hunting, zoos, and entertainment.

There are more than 400 animal rights groups in the United States. They have developed a priority list of groups violating animal rights. The poultry industry has been identified as one of these priority groups.

The implications for the poultry industry are great. These groups have developed advertising that projects an unfavorable image of the industry, developed legislation regulating poultry husbandry practices, and organized raids against poultry farms.

As with any movement, there are varying degrees of activity. This is true for the animal rights movement. The radical wing of the movement is called the Animal Liberation Front (ALF). This group encourages the use of terrorist activity to liberate animals. ALF has claimed responsibility for vandalizing research laboratories, farms, and feed mills. The group has developed a manual describing how to conduct terrorist activities. The manual describes how to organize a strike group, overviews surveillance procedures, describes communication methods, includes information on making homemade bombs, shows ways to disable vehicles, and tells how to time break-ins.

Every poultry producer needs to develop a procedure to minimize vandalism. Some items to consider:

1. Post "No Trespassing" signs.
2. Purchase a cellular phone to call police in case of a break-in. (Phone wires maybe cut in a break-in.)
3. Keep all buildings locked.
4. Be on the lookout for unauthorized people.
5. Do not allow visitors inside your poultry houses.
6. Do not allow strangers to take pictures of your farm.
7. Do a through check of all new employees.
8. Develop a emergency procedure with local police.
9. Keep vehicles and tractors in secured areas.
10. Have outdoor lights.
11. Keep a dog.
13. Do not shoot a trespasser. Call the police and let them handle the situtation.
14. Purchase a videotape security system.

Today's poultry operations are major business enterprises. Poultry producers need to be concerned with the same security issues as any other business. Take time now to make your poultry houses secure from uninvited visitors.

Pseudorabies Eradication Program Under Way

MADISON, Wis. — The national pseudorabies eradication program is off and running, with strong pork producer support for the program and the likelihood that tests which can distinguish between vaccinated and non-vaccinated animals should be made "official" tests within the next few months.

These were some of the conclusions of the Livestock Conservation Institute (LCI) Pseudorabies Committee, which met at the LCI Annual Meeting April 3-5 in Louisville, Kentucky.

The LCI Pseudorabies Committee expressed frustration about the lengthy delay in making the differential test on official test, since the test has been available for over a year but its use has been restricted awaiting its official status. The Committee passed a resultion that USDA develop a system of departmental review that will expedite the process of approving such tests, especially when delay is due to indecision by those reviewing the data, and additional data is not needed.

States are moving forward in the eradication program with 28 states now qualifying for status. Currently, there are 7 states in the mandatory cleanup phase of the program (Stage III), 13 states in the control stage (Stage II), and 8 states in the preparation stage (Stage I).

In order to move ahead further in the eradication program, the committee passed a resolution that the PRV program standards be amended to permit states to have split status. This will allow more of the program funds to be directed to key areas in the state for herd cleanup and control. The National Pseudorabies Control Board and the APHIS Technical Advisory Committee also recommended that the program standards be amended to permit split status. The Pseudorabies Committee of the United States Animal Health Association will meet in October 1990 to make their recommendation to USDA on this issue.

Farm Tractors: Accidents Waiting To Happen

COLUMBIA, Mo. — Many farmers show a "blatant disregard for safety" by failing to maintain tractor safety devices, a Missouri study shows.

"Half of the tractors we tested did not have power take-off (PTO) shields," said James Frisby, professor and chairman of the University of Missouri-Columbia Department of Agricultural Engineering.

"That's not surprising," said Frisby. "Other studies have shown there is less than a 50 percent chance that tractor owners and operators will replace PTO shields after removing them."

Frisby and three other agricultural engineers conducted six tractor-testing clinics in Missouri in the last two years. The team found tractors had some serious safety-related deficiencies.

Not one tractor operator carried a fire extinguisher or a first-aid kit.

Most warning lights were faulty (31 percent of the hazard lights, 29 percent of the taillights, and 42 percent of the turn signals either were not present or did not work properly).

"As tractors get older, farmers tend to neglect maintenance of original equipment manufacturers' (OEM) safety devices," Frisby said. He urges farmers to maintain these safety devices just as they would the tractor's engine.

Frisby was joined in the farm safety study by Leon Schumacher, now at North Dakota State University; William Hires, University of Missouri; and J. Daniel Chappell, high school vocational agriculture teacher in Camdenton, Missouri.

Extension Studies Maple Syrup Production

TOWANDA (Bradford Co.) — The Penn State Cooperative Extension is presently conducting a survey to determine the amount of maple syrup produced in the Northern Tier counties of the commonwealth.

Maple producers who are members of maple producers associations should receive these surveys in the mail. If you produce maple syrup but are not a member of a maple producers association, we would appreciate it if you could let us know so we can send you a survey.

We need to include all the producers if we are to gain an accurate figure of the amount of maple syrup produced in these countries. This information will allow us to better serve your needs as maple producers. Please contact the following people for more information: Dr. Robert S. Hansen, Area Extension Forester, Penn State Coop. Extension, PO Box 69, Towanda, PA 18848, (717) 265-2896; Edward Pruss, County Extension Agent, Penn State Coop. Panel Combats Chemical-Resistant Pest

WASHINGTON, D.C.— U.S. livestock producers are being offered new strategies for their war on the horn fly, a cattle pest becoming resistant to pyrethroid insecticides, said a U.S. Department of Agriculture scientist.

Entomologist Sidney E. Kunz of USDA's Agricultural Research Service headed a panel of federal, state, and industry experts that devised the new strategies and has prepared a fact sheet describing them.

He said the fly's growing resistance to pyrethroids is a problem in all major cattle producing areas of the U.S. -- including Hawaii -- and in parts of Canada. Horn fly season begins as early as mid-March and lasts until the first frost in some areas, he said.

The strategies include not applying any horn-fly insecticide until flies become a serious problem, using compounds other then pyrethroids, and timing chemical controls to get maximum results and minimal resistance buildup. Kunz said the strategies can be use singly or in combination.

"Horn flies have adapted to chemicals intended to overwhelm them," he said. "They became resistant and through breeding they passed on this resistance to their offspring. Our panel's goals are to minimize the resistance problem while getting the best use out of existing insecticides." Kunz is director of the Knipling-Bushland U.S. Livestock Insects Research Laboratory that ARS operates in Kerrville, TX.

"These flies cost U.S. livestock producers about $700 million annually in reduced weight gains and milk production for nursing calves," he said.

The pests can reduce weaning weights of calves by 15 to 40 pounds, said University of Nebraska Extension entomologist Jack Campbell, who served on the panel. "At today's prices, that kind of loss can average $25 per calf," he said.

"Farmers and ranchers should start planning their pest control strategies now," said Kunz, "so the flies cannot breed future generations that could resist any class of commercial insecticide."

The panel, appointed by the chairman of the North Central Regional Research Committee 99 (livestock pest management), included experts from the Agricultural Research Service, Cornell University (Ithaca, NY), Oklahoma State University (Stillwater), University of Nebraska (North Platte), Fermenta Animal Health (Kansas City, MO), Y-TEX Corp. (Cody, WY) and Zoecon Corp. (Dallas, TX).

In the mid-1970s, technology developed by Kansas State University, Oklahoma State University, and ARS gave cattle producers ear tags that slowly released an insecticide. The first ear tags held organophosphates, effective against horn flies for 6 to 10 weeks. Then came pyrethroid tags, which controlled them for 16 to 24 weeks. In 1984 more than 50 percent of all cattle wore pyrethroid tags.

Ear tags quickly became popular because they were economical and effective and used 98 percent less chemical. But within two to three years, flies began to develop resistance, said Kunz.

Kunz said "heavy reliance on ear tags and the class of insecticides they held -- pyrethroids -- may have inadvertently helped the flies become resistant. But extensive use of any compound by any application method that simulates the ear tag intensity can and will cause similar resistance problems."

Federal, state, and industry researchers continue to study the problem and search for long-term, effective controls that will prevent buildup of insecticide resistance, he said.

SCABBLING is an effective way to avoid unnecessary losses of cattle. The SCABBLER makes bands about two inches wide approximately 1/8" to 3/16 in. depth. This gives sufficient area for good footing while allowing you to scrape the smooth surface as before. It is near enough to the surface to give your cows full advantage of the roughness and deep enough to remain effective for years. It greatly aids in heat detection.

And the good news is that it is reasonably priced. You have the choice of doing it yourself or having us do it for you. We offer service right to your door. Call us for more details.

Double SS: New Forage Seed Mix

HALL, NY — Eastland Double SS Brand is a new forage seed mixture developed for production of high quality forage in solid seeded stands. Double SS components are Northeast — adapted grain sorghum and soybeans.

Key benefits are double crop potential, high forage quality, and reduced crop inputs compared to corn silage. Lower fertilizer, herbicide, and insecticide costs combined with the ability to better control erosion make this alternative worth considering.

Grain sorghum-soybean culture for forage production has been successfully used in the Northeast in the last decade — it is not a totally new concept. Growers have indicated 3-8 ton per acre dry matter yields with 12-18 percent protein in 1989 plantings.

Double SS is premixed in 50-pound units for grower convenience. Contact Seedway, at 800-836-3720 for more information.

Yoder Captures 'Horn Of Plenty' Award

WHITE PLAINS, NY — Glenn Yoder, Allied-Signal's northeast district manager, was awarded the 1988/89 Horn of Plenty Fertilizer Salesmanship Award by "Custom Applicator" magazine.

Yoder was nominated by his customers and selected by a panel of judges chosen by the magazine.

"Glenn Yoder has that special ability to fairly serve both his customers' needs and Allied's needs at the same time," said Glen Kitson, regional sales manager-north at Allied-Signal.

The award was named "Horn of Plenty" because of the important role plant food people play in the productivity of the farm. Yoder received the award in the form of a plaque at a November ceremony in Richmond, Virginia.

Yoder has been with Allied-Signal since 1965, after earning an agriculture degree from Penn State University and serving in the United States Navy. As northeast district manager, Yoder is responsible for sales of SULF-N 45 ammonium sulfate fertilizer in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, and the New England states.

Grain Loan Rates Announced

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Loan Rates for Berks County's 1990 wheat, barley, oats, and rye crops were recently announced by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

The rates reflect changes in the national average price support rates from last year, according to ASCS official Donald Lutz.

Berks County farmers may obtain price support loans on their 1990 wheat at a rate of $2.11 per bushel; barley, $1.25 per bushel; oats, .91 per bushel; and rye, $1.46 per bushel.

Lutz says some county rates were adjusted to reflect location and transportation costs and other factors.

The price support loan program serves as a marketing tool for farmers by enabling them to take advantage of any increase in market prices at a later time.

Aerocool™ Panels Easy To Install

LANSING, Mich. — A unique new design with features making evaporative cooling systems easier to install, simpler to maintain, and more efficient has been introduced by Aerotech, Inc.

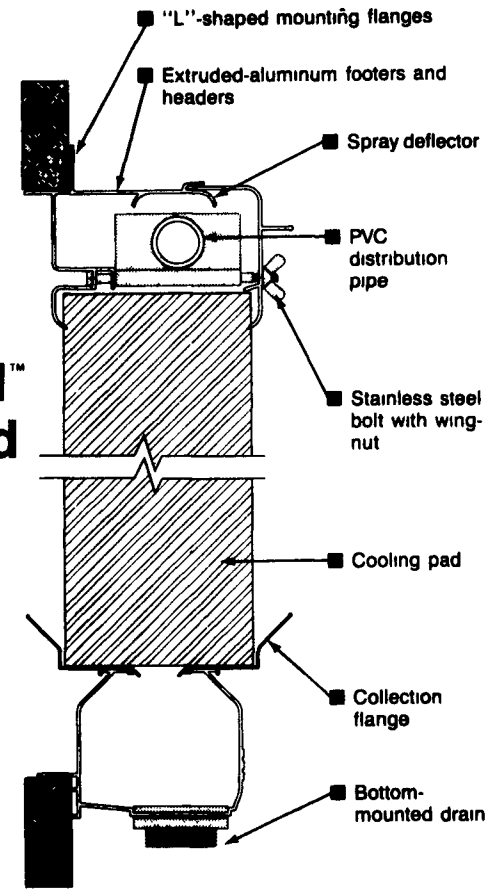
The L-shaped mounting flanges on the Aerocool™ panels simplify installation. PVC distribution pipe is sized to the system ensuring even pad wetting. Stainless steel bolts and wing nuts permit easy removal of the front header plate for inspection. The 6-inch cellulose pads offer outstanding efficiency and durability.

The improved cooling panels can be quickly installed by screwing or bolting the extruded aluminum headers and footers directly to wood or metal framing for a clean, finished installation. There is no need for special framing, flashing, or extensions.

An extruded aluminum header surrounds a PVC distribution pipe with precisely positioned baffles to thoroughly and evenly wet the pad.

The Aerocool™ system is also easy to maintain, which is critical to most swine producers. Plastic wing-nuts allow quick removal of the face panel on the header for routine maintenance and complete access to the pads, distribution pipe, and collection trough.

The 6-inch thick cellulose pads do a superior job of cooling air. The shape and angle of the rugged cellulose pad flutes provide a large wetted surface without a corresponding restriction to airflow. In fact, resistance at 400 feet per minute is only about half of that created by similar 4-inch thick pads.



The L-shaped mounting flanges on the Aerocool™ extruded aluminum cooling panels by Aerotech simplify installation. PVC distribution pipe is sized to the system, ensuring even pad wetting. Stainless steel bolts and wing nuts permit easy removal of the front header plate for inspection.

'Fortress' Granted EUP

WASHINGTON, D.C. — New Du Pont "Fortress" 5G soil insecticide has been granted an experimental use permit (EUP) by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

The temporary tolerance EUP allows "Fortress" to be used on 2,000 corn acres during 1990.

"We're very impressed with what 'Fortress' has done in field testing," said product manager Joe Anderson. "'Fortress' data shows excellent broad-spectrum control of several major corn pests."

"Fortress" is being used in EUP trials for control of western, northern, and southern corn rootworm; black and dingy cutworm; wireworm; seed corn maggot; and white grub.

"Fortress" has been tested for several years in laboratory and small plot testing. This year's EUP data will be compiled with 1989 EUP on-farm data for writing a complete use label.

"Fortress" is a low-use-rate insecticide and is being targeted for use at one-quarter pound of active ingredient per acre.

Anderson mentioned several environmental benefits of the product. "Fortress" does not leach in the soil like some other insecticides. Although it remains effective well into the growing season, it does not have a long residual life and will not carry over into subsequent crops.

Full registration and commercial availability of "Fortress" is expected in the early 1990s, according to Du Pont.

Lodging is an obvious sign of corn rootworms. Another common but more subtle sign is yield loss. Du Pont is researching "Fortress," a new corn insecticide, which should make both lodging and yield losses less common.

Olin Applauds Dairy Price Change

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Congressman Jim Olin (D-VA) commended the U.S. Department of Agriculture for its decision to adjust the prices that it will pay for butter and non-fat dry milk that is sold to the Commodity Credit Corporation.

Olin, a member of the House Subcommittee on Livestock, Dairy and Poultry, has authored legislation that would require the USDA to adjust prices of butter and non-fat dry milk when CCC purchases of those products are out of proportion to their appearance in whole milk.

"This is the right way to deal with the butter surplus," Olin said. "Instead of designing new complicated schemes, like the dairy title to the farm bill reported out of the House subcommittee, we should allow the market to bring purchases into balance."

Olin's bill, The Dairy Stabilization Act of 1990, continues the current policy of tying changes in the support price to the amount of surplus purchases. However, it increases the amount of surplus purchases that will trigger price increases and reductions. In addition, it mandates product price changes, instead of leaving it discretionary, as in current law.

"In the past, the USDA has waited for support price cuts before it has implemented changes in the relative product prices," Olin said. "I believe that we do not a need price support cut to deal with the butter surplus. And we don't need quotas and assessments. We only need to get the price of milk products in line with their value in the market."

Olin plans to offer his bill, H.R. 4254, as an amendment to the Farm Bill when the full Agriculture Committee acts in May.

Prof Advocates Alliance To Prevent Viruses

MADISON, Wis. — "An allicance of veterinary/livestock, human health, and environmental interests would be beneficial, so that coordinated action to prevent emergence of new viruses could be implemented," said Dr. Stephen Morse, assistant professor of virology at the Rockefeller University in New York City.

Morse addressed the general session at the annual meeting of Livestock Conservation Institute (LCI), held in Louisville, Kentucky April 3-5, 1990.

"New" viruses are seldom newly evolved, but are often viruses already in nature that gain access to new host populations, according to Morse.

Morse said, "Changing environmental conditions are often responsible for the movement of viruses to new species. Often, human activities such as clearing forests, building dams, or moving livestock are at the root of the problem."

Livestock serve as an early warning indicator for emerging viruses which may eventually find their way into the human population (zoonotic diseases).

An example of a zoonotic disease is Rift Valley fever. Rift Valley fever is a mosquito-borne disease which originated in Africa. It started out as a disease in sheep and cattle and evolved into a human disease in the mid-1970s, with 588 deaths reported in Egypt in 1977. Dam building, which enabled the mosquito population to multiply, helped the virus to spread, according to Morse.

John H. Lang, LCI president and C.E.O. said, "The potential link between livestock and human viral disease is a very strong argument for effective livestock disease surveillance programs."

The board of directors of LCI passed a resolution urging the Secretary of Agriculture to cooperate with the Animal Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS) to identify and provide the necessary resources to realign its priorities to develop and maintain the infrastructure of personnel, equipment, facilities, and funds to maintain core programs of foreign animal disease preparedness, animal health monitoring, and domestic livestock disease eradication and control.

The Board resolved that a major APHIS priority be to rebuild and station its field staff throughout the United States on the basis of livestock demographics and risk of exposure to foreign animal diseases.

The board recommended that the APHIS foreign animal disease preparedness program should include the initiation of an emergency response fund; education of the general public; a mechanism to coordinate APHIS research with Agricultural Research Service (ARS) research; developing a cadre of trained animal health professionals; and developing effective foreign and domestic disease surveillance and detection programs.

Angus Prices Higher

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. — Registered Angus bulls sold at auction the first six months of the 1990 fiscal year averaged $2,134, some $65 higher than the all-time record average of $2,069 set during 1989, reported Richard L. Spader, executive vice president of the American Angus Association.

Since October 1, 1989, results of 249 Angus auction sales have been reported to the American Angus Association, at which 7,683.5 bulls sold. At the same sales, 11,312 females were auctioned for an average of $1,715, which is $3 per head higher than the record average price set for Angus females last year. In addition, 127 registered Angus steers averaged $770 each.

Total money paid out for Angus females at auction the first six months of the 1990 fiscal year is $19,394,512. Bulls grossed $16,396,246 and steers totaled $97,788. The average for all Angus cattle sold during the period is $1,876.

Prior Permission Needed

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — To avoid penalties, farm-stored grain under loan may only be moved or disposed of with prior permission from the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

Donald Lutz, an official of the agency, said farmers will be subject to severe penalties if they remove federally-mortgaged grain before repayment of the loan or receipt of release authorization. The penalties consist of immediate repayment of the loan, plus interest, denial of further loans, and possible investigation by the Office of the Inspector General.

Farm program participants must notify ASCS if they plan to sell grain under loan, or if the grain is in poor condition and needs to be moved. If the grain is to be used for feed, farmers must repay the loan before the grain is removed from the storage bin.

To avoid administrative penalties, Lutz said farmers should contact ASCS for specific details before moving any farm-stored grain.

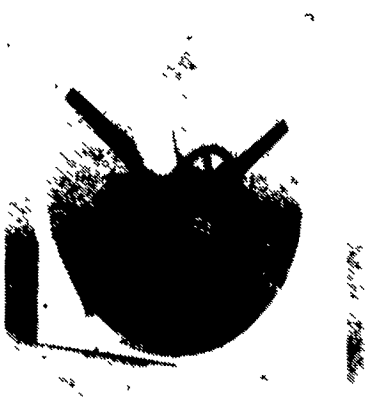
Fans Move Up To 15 Percent More Air

DES MOINES, Iowa — A new line of 36" to 48" belt-drive fans with several new features to increase reliability and value has been introduced by Aerotech, Inc.

Advancements include Aeroflow™ propeller tips and deep venturis for increased air flow efficiency; no stretch belts that eliminate the need for belt tighteners; tough, thermopolymer-coated galvanized panels for use in corrosive environments; and premium, self-aligning air handling bearings.

The new Aerotech belt drive fans move up to 15 percent more air than conventional fans. For example, the 48" Aerotech belt drive fan with cone moves about 3,000 cfm more air than a conventional fan. Consequently, six Aerotech fans with discharge cones move the same amount of air as seven conventional fans.

The fans are efficient because all of the parts are designed to work as a system: prop size, pitch, rpm and motor, venturi and discharge cones are carefully matched for optimum performance. In addition, each fan is designed and tested under real-life operating conditions to ensure full-rated performance in the field.



A new line of 36-inch to 48-inch belt drive fans have several new features. The fans, with Aeroflow™ propeller tips and discharge cones for swine houses, move up to 15 percent more air than conventional fans.

The extra deep, close-tolerance Aerotech venturi in the panel extends beyond the propeller, thus smoothing and speeding airflow through the fan for greater efficiency. Both cone angle and depth are designed for optimum air flow.

The three-blade, airfoil-shaped propeller moves more air per watt than old-fashioned stamped blades. And the Aeroflow™ propeller tip reduces vortex turbulence to further increase airflow efficiency.

There is no longer a need for a belt tightener with the new self-adjusting Aerolink™ belt. The improved, no-stretch belts also run smoother and last longer because there is no splice to cause vibrations.

Oversized motor bearings are lubricated and sealed for life. The heavy, cast-iron, pillow-block, special air-handling fan bearings with premium seals are self-aligning and feature a grease fitting to ensure years of severe use. The precision ball-bearing insert has an extra-wide inner race to prevent rocking, wear, and vibration.

All hardware for the galvanized fan units is zinc-plated for corrosion resistance.

For more information, contact Aerotech, Inc., 929 Terminal Road, Lansing, MI 48906, (800) 277-AERO or (517) 323-2930.

NFU Praises Senate Ag Committee For GATT Amendments

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The president of the National Farmers Union (NFU), today praised the Senate Agriculture Committee for adopting an amendment to the pending 1990 Farm Bill that "sends a clear signal that Congress intends to protect the interests of U.S. farmers during the GATT agriculture negotiations."

Committee members adopted the amendment as part of a package of changes they are considering in the trade title of the 1990 Farm Bill. The amendment calls on U.S. negotiators to the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) to seek the elimination of direct export subsidies but not to enter into agreements that would "unduly restrict the authority of the United States to provide for the stabilization of its agricultural economy."

NFU President Leland Swenson said the committee's action should tell U.S. GATT negotiators that they don't have "unlimited authority to trade away" U.S. domestic farm programs.

"It shows the committee's clear intention to maintain its right to set a domestic farm policy agenda for the U.S. and not turn that responsibility over to overseas bureaucrats," Swenson said.

Swenson's group is concerned that the U.S. position in the GATT talks to do away with "trade-distorting" farm programs is too broad and will limit the authority of Congress to develop domestic farm programs.

The Senate measure states that the GATT agreement should still allow U.S. farmers to have "an income safety net to protect against market instability" and should "allow countries to provide income support from the vagaries of the market directly or indirectly through self-help efforts."

"Adoption of this amendment is a step in the right direction," Swenson said. "We hope the House Agriculture Committee will take similar action as it marks up the farm bill. Over this past year (House Agriculture Committee) Chairman (Kika) de la Garza has said many times that U.S. farm policy will be written in Washington, not Geneva. We hope he will urge his committee to include similar language in the farm bill adopted by the House."

Swenson said his group will lobby to make sure the newly-passed GATT amendment remains in the Farm Bill.

Northumberland Man Appointed To PDPP Marketing Board

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Northumberland County Dairy Farmer Robert Pardoe Sr., has been appointed to the Dairy Promotion Program's Commodity Marketing Board.

The Pardoe family farms 320 acres just east of Lewisburg, including 68 registered Holsteins. Pardoe serves as chairman of the Dairy Committee for the Pennsylvania State Grange, as treasurer of the Pennsylvania Association of Farmers Cooperatives, and on the board of the American Dairy Association/Dairy Council.

As a member of the PDPP Commodity Marketing Board, Pardoe will help administer a $1.5 million annual budget designed to expand consumption of Pennsylvania dairy products through market promotion, research and nutrition education programs. His term expires in October 1991.

The Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program was reorganized by state law in 1987 to give dairy farmers direct control of product marketing. The program is voluntarily supported by more than 4,000 dairy farmers statewide.

Dairymen Plan Select Sires' Genetics

PLAIN CITY, OHIO — Key dairymen from the 12-member organizations of Select Sires Inc., met recently in Columbus, Ohio, to plan for Select's future genetic pacesetters.

These dairymen are members of Select Sires Holstein Sire Committee. As committeemen they met with Select's Dairy Sire Department and discussed objectives of the Program for Genetic Advancement (PGA).

With their "hands-on" experience, the sire committee offered guidelines for future young sire development procedures. These gentlemen are taking a key role in developing new and innovative matings that will affect all dairymen in the coming decade.

During the annual committee meetings, committeemen from all the breeds met jointly to discuss topics that will affect the entire industry.

The meetings were moderated by Select Sires staff as well as dairy resource extension personnel from throughout the country.

Research and extension personnel attending the meeting were Dr. Margaret Dentine, University of Wisconsin, Madison; Dr. Ron Pearson, Virginia Polytech Institute-SU; Dr. Paul Van Raden, USDA-AIPL; Dr. Cameron Thraen, the Ohio State University; and Dr. Jack McAllister, University of Kentucky.

These extension specialists exposed the committeemen to new developments in genetic research and the effects on future generation.

Dr. Dentine introduced the use of genetic markers in evaluating a bulls genetic potential.

Dr. Van Raden explained the effects of the Animal Model on sire summaries and changes that have resulted.

Dr. Thraen expanded on milk pricing and consumer preferences toward dairy products.

The final presentation was by Dr. McAllister. He explained Canadian sire proving and its comparison with the U.S. system.

Be Aware Of Child Labor Laws

TOWANDA (Bradford Co.) — Farmers who expect to hire anyone under 16 years of age to work on a farm should be aware of the child labor requirements in agriculture under the Fair Labor Standards Act.

Under child labor provisions of the act, it is unlawful for an employer to hire anyone under 16 years of age to operate a tractor of over 20 P.T.O. horsepower, or connecting or disconnecting an implement or any of its parts to or from such a tractor. Also, operating or assisting to operate most tractor powered or self-powered equipment is illegal. Some livestock, lumbering, storage, and pesticide work is classified hazardous and illegal. Youth employed by parent or guardian are exempt.

Some may question the legal importance of the training, since there haven't been any court cases in PA. However, if a serious accident involving an uncertified youth occurs, the resulting investigations could be very uncomfortable for the employer.

Fines to an employer may be $1,000 first offense, and more than $10,000 or up to six months imprisonment or both for a second offense. Youth 14 and 15 years of age may be legally hired if they become certified through a tractor certification program. The certification indicates that the bearer has completed safety instructions and is not an operators license.

A certification program will be available starting at 7:00 p.m. on May 3 at the extension office. If a youth 14 or 15 years of age plans to work on a farm this summer, or if a farmer plans to hire a person of this age, they may become certified by completing this course.

There will be four evening sessions starting at 7:00 p.m. on May 3, 7, 15, and 17 and a morning session starting at 9:00 a.m. Saturday, May 19, during which a driving test will be given. Youth 13 years of age will be accepted but will not receive their certification until their 14th birthday.

Marketing Niches

By Dr. Richard Barczewski
Extension County
Agricultural Agent
University of Delaware

I've noticed over the last five years that some of the most successful farmers are the ones who have been able to find specific niches in the market. You may think this is improbable for a hog producer, and more likely for someone who grows fruits and vegetables, but a look at our industry might reveal niches you can pursue.

First, most hog producers have the capability to produce feeder pigs or market hogs. Some have already decided to address one or the other of these market niches while others leave themselves the flexibility of going either way, depending upon prices.

Obviously a producer with an expensive facility cannot afford this luxury. Large-scale production units need to be used if they are going to be paid for, and we all know that vacant buildings tend to deteriorate faster than those in use.

Other niches in the hog industry are seedstock production (either boars or gilts), feeder pigs for youth projects, and freezer hogs. These enterprises, however, involve more work than the two more traditional channels I've already mentioned.

If you decide to produce seedstock, you'll need to promote your breeding lines and the productive capabilities of those lines. Often seedstock producers get involved in the show ring end of hog production, trying to produce the type of hog that show-ring judges want. This can be either good or bad, depending on where their markets are. If they sell to producers who are interested in the show ring, then they are doing the right thing.

Some seedstock producers aim toward the production end of the industry, selecting for productive traits such as growth rate, feed efficiency, and carcass traits. Many more producers, other than just the show-ring type, are interested in these characteristics too, so this is a larger market.

A third group of seedstock producers try to address both the show ring and production markets, realizing that they can direct their breeding programs to show-type and still place emphasis on production traits. There are advantages and disadvantages to this thinking, but it does allow an ambitious person the opportunity to address two markets at once.

Each year numerous 4-H and FFA members show hogs at county, state, and regional fairs across the country. Many of these individuals may raise only a few hogs each year and must get their show prospects from swine breeders. This provides another market niche for the hog producer to consider.

Feeder pigs to be raised as youth-project animals need to excel in the traits that judges are looking for at that time. It's hard to second-guess a judge, but for the most part, these animals must exhibit ideal carcass traits along with the ability to move freely. Reputations are made when particular breeders sell feeder pigs that eventually go on to become champions at the livestock shows around the area.

While individual animals command top dollar in this market, the number of animals that a producer can sell as project animals is relatively small compared to those sold through normal marketing channels.

Another often neglected marketing niche is the freezer trade. Many people like to purchase their meat as whole animals at various carcass sizes. While some may want to buy a whole or half hog for the freezer, others may desire a lighter-weight carcass or carcasses cut to specifications they can't get in the grocery store. In addition, there is always a market for barbecue pigs of varying weights, especially through the summer.

With all the concern about antibiotics and feed additives, a potential market is evolving in antibiotic-feed, additive-free pork. Some may argue that this only fuels the controversy about the safety of our products, but, in reality, this is just another situation where a producer can find a markets niche.

As with any commodity, finding a niche is essential to maximize the profit potential of your operation. Some producers are not willing to spend the additional time needed to capitalize on these alternative markets and continue to sell animals through traditional channels. This is perfectly fine; however, in an effort to maximize profitability, these or other marketing niches may play a part in your operation.

Membership terms on the 18-member board are staggered to provide a continuity in policy. The board administers an egg research and promotion program authorized by the Egg Research and Consumer Information Act of 1974. USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service reviews the program's budget, plans, and projects to assure that it operates in the public interest.

The program is funded entirely by a 5-cent per 30-dozen assessment on eggs marketed by egg producers with flocks of more than 30,000 hens.

Growing Season Off To Wet Start

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.)— The state's 1990 growing season has begun on a soggy note with precipitation recorded every day at all National Weather Service reporting stations during the week ending April 8.

In its initial Weekly Crop and Weather Roundup for the year, the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service (PASS) noted that survey respondents across the state rated an average of only one day suitable for field work.

Farm activities for the week included limited spring plowing and planting, repairing fence, hauling manure, spreading manure, and caring for livestock.

Statewide, PASS noted that topsoil moisture was rated short by 2 percent of its respondents, adequate by 72 percent, and surplus by 26 percent. The report by regions: Northern, 5 percent short, 89 percent adequate and 6 percent surplus; central, 75 percent adequate and 25 percent surplus; and southern, 50 percent adequate and 50 percent surplus.

By week's end, spring plowing was 31 percent complete statewide, compared with only 8 percent at this time last year; the five-year average was 21 percent. In the northern region, plowing was 23 percent complete; central, 35 percent; and southern, 35 percent.

PASS issued progress reports on the following crops:

Corn -- None of the Commonwealth's 1990 corn was planted by the end of the week. The same was true at this time last year and for each of the past five years.

Oats -- PASS reporters estimated that 26 percent of the oats crop was planted, in contrast to 5 percent a year ago. The five-year average was 19 percent. In the northern region, the 1990 crop was 15 percent planted; central, 20 percent; and southern, 45 percent. The crop was rated 31 percent excellent, 65 percent good, 3 percent fair, and 1 percent poor.

Potatoes -- Throughout the state, 12 percent of the potato acreage was planted, compared with last year's 0 percent and the five-year average of 0 percent.

Barley and wheat -- Both crops remained in the pre-boot stage of development. PASS reporters rated the wheat crop as 19 percent excellent, 57 percent good, 20 percent fair, and 4 percent poor.

Fruit -- Survey respondents reported that heavy frost damage had affected the state's fruit crops. Estimates were that 63 percent of the peaches were in the pre-pink stage, 25 percent were pink, and 12 percent were full bloom or past. At the same time last year, all the peaches were in the pre-pink stage. Cherries are reported 88 percent pre-pink, 10 percent pink and 2 percent full bloom, compared with last year's 100 percent pre-pink. Apples were 93 percent pre-pink and 7 percent pink, while none were full bloom. A year ago, the apples were all pre-pink.

Hay and pasture -- Alfalfa hay stands were reported good by 40 percent and fair by 60 percent. Clover-timothy stands were rated good by 28 percent, fair by 67 percent, and poor by 5 percent. The amount of feed being obtained from pasture was reported above average by 7 percent, average by 46 percent, and below average by 47 percent.

LCI Board Approves Resolutions

MADISON, Wis.— The board of directors of Livestock Conservation Institute (LCI) approved several resolutions at the LCI annual meeting held April 3-5, 1990, in Louisville, KY.

The Board recommended that LCI establish itself as a coordinating point for the animal product industry, to exchange information on food safety issues, and generate understanding of challenges each group in the chain faces, in an effort to generate appropriate responses to food safety assurance issues. In addition, that LCI develop and promote educational programs for implementation of quality assurance for the animal product industry.

Other actions taken by the board included: 1) Encouraging formal dialogue between APHIS and the National Park Service regarding brucellosis in wild elk and bison in Yellowstone National Park; 2) Supporting the rapid completion plan for brucellosis eradication and that when funds become available they are directed to appropriate program areas; 3) Recommending both the approval of differential pseudorabies diagnostic tests as official disease diagnostics and the recognition of spit-state status to increase the effectiveness of pseudorabies eradication; 4) Recommending that APHIS reinstates its budget to recognize its basic infrastructure and core funding, rather than including them in line item disease programs; 5) Supporting programs to reduce the threat of foreign animal diseases and to increase foreign animal disease preparedness in the United States; 6) Organizing a joint committee to develop strategies to control and eradicate swine dysentery; 7) Recommending pilot projects to develop methods of controlling and eliminating toxoplasmosis at the source of production; 8) Supporting a framework for the development of scrapie control programs and organizing an LCI "Sheep Group" as a new committee; 9) Organizing a "mystery swine disease" committee; 10) Supporting the proper use and storage of medications by veterinarians and producers; 11) Supporting the funding and research of the pathogenesis, management, control, and the development of official, accurate diagnostic tests for Johne's disease; 12) Supporting the development of methods other than antibiotics/sulfa for the treatment and prevention of mastitis; 14) Recommending that matters pertaining to the Plum Island Animal Disease Center be directly handled by the offices of the administrators of the Animal Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS) and the Agricultural Research Service (ARS); 15) Encouraging the United States Department of State, the United States Agency for International Development, and the United States Department of Agriculture to support the Pan American Health Organization in its effort to eliminate this disease from our hemisphere; 16) Urging APHIS and USDA to take whatever actions are needed quickly, to make the latest technology on acaricides available so the pilot project regarding bont tick eradication on Antigua can be started; and 17) Recommending that USDA closely monitor the situation in Mexico and provide assistance to control hog cholera and to assure reliable mechanisms to prevent outbreaks of the disease in this country.

A new hog indentification device was introduced at the LCI Identification Committee meeting by Joe Smith, president of BIO-ID, Inc., Hartford City, IN.

Information is printed on the implanted device, which is made from ingredients "generally recognized as safe" by the FDA. The device is chemically and physically compatible with the host. The implanted carcasses are easily visually detected at the head inspection station on the kill floor. If the identification device is not needed, it is trimmed with the fat and disintegrates during rendering.

Meet Eligibility Requirements

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — ASCS Official Donald Lutz said the grazing period on land designated as acreage conservation reserve and conservation use acreage for pay (including the required 8 percent) closed April 1, 1990. The non-grazing period runs through August 31, 1990.

Lutz also reminds farmers to be sure that cropland designated for acreage conservation reserve meets the eligibility requirements.

Cropland designated under the 1990 wheat and feed grains acreage reduction programs cannot be hayed or grazed during the principal growing months. Lutz said that haying of these acres after August 31, 1990 has been authorized by the state ASC committee.

PDPP Approves Funding

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.)— The Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program (PDPP) has approved more than $30,000 for 35 local dairy promotion committees throughout Pennsylvania.

The PDPP also provides promotional materials for the committees including the "Happiness is a Cow" coloring book, various recipe leaflets, and other materials. In addition, the PDPP provides mileage reimbursements for county dairy princesses across Pennsylvania.

BASIC HORSE SAFETY

James P. Gallagher
Extension Horse Specialist
Pennsylvania State University

Approaching

Always speak to your horse before approaching or touching him. Some horses are likely to jump and may kick when startled.

Always approach your horse from the front. If he's turned away from you, call to him or entice him with a treat to get him to come to you. Never approach your horse directly from the rear. Even in a tie stall it is possible to approach from an angle at the rear.

Pet a horse by first placing a hand on its shoulder or neck. The touch should be a rubbing action. Don't "dab" at the end of a horse's nose.

If he is tied, get him to look at you. Always notice a horse's expression before advancing.

Handling

When working around your horse, wear boots or hard-toed shoes to protect your feet. Never wear tennis shoes, moccasins, or go barefoot.

When working around your horse, tie him securely with a quick release knot or have someone hold him with a lead rope. Use cross-ties when possible but be sure they have panic snaps or are secured with a breakable tie, such as baling twine.

Always work close to your horse. If you are near his shoulder, you won't be struck with the full force of his feet. Nor will you receive the full force of a kick when you work about the haunches or pass behind your horse if you stay close to the body.

Know your horse, his temperament, and reactions. Control your temper at all times, but be firm.

Always let a horse know what you intend to do. When picking up the feet, for example, do not grab the foot hurriedly. This will startle the horse and may cause it to kick. When lifting the foot, touch the shoulder or hind quarter and then run your hand down the leg. When you get to the fetlock say "up" and squeeze the joint. The horse should pick up his foot for you.

Work about a horse from a position as near the shoulder as possible.

Never stand directly behind a horse or directly in front of him. To work with its tail, stand off to the side, near the point of the buttock, facing to the rear. Grasp the tail and draw it around to you.

Be calm, confident, and collected around horses. A nervous handler can make a nervous horse.

Do not drop grooming tools underfoot while grooming. Place them where you will not trip on them and they will not be stepped on by the horse.

Don't tease your horse. Teasing may cause it to develop dangerous habits for the rest of its life. Avoid feeding the horse treats from your hand frequently.

Punish a horse only at the instant it disobeys. If you wait, even for a minute, it will not understand why it is being punished. Punish without anger or your punishment may be too severe. Never strike a horse about its head.

Be sure your turnout area has been checked for old machinery; broken boards and nails; poisonous plants; and wild cherry, red maple, or black walnut trees. Fences should be checked frequently for loose nails, broken sections, and loose wire.

If it is necessary to leave a loose halter on a horse, the halter must be a break-away halter. You can make a break-away halter by using a piece of baling twine or by replacing the crown piece with a section of an old, lightweight, leather belt.

If the halter is too loose, the horse may catch a foot in the halter, especially if he is trying to scratch his head with a hind foot. A loose halter may catch on fence posts or other pasture objects. Some halter materials will shrink if they get wet, so be sure to check the fit.

Leading

When leading your horse, walk beside him, not ahead or behind. A position even with the horse's head or halfway between the horse's head and its shoulder is considered safest.

Always turn the horse away from you and walk around it.

Use a long lead shank and both hands when leading. If the horse rears up, release the hand nearest to the halter so you can stay on the ground.

It is customary to lead from the left (near side), using the right hand to hold the lead, near the halter. The excess portion of the lead should be folded, figure-eight style.

When leading, extend your right elbow slightly toward the horse. If the horse makes contact with you, its shoulder will hit your elbow first and move you away from it.

Your elbow can also be used in the horse's neck to keep the head and neck straight as well as to prevent the horse from crowding you.

Cattle Pest Resists Insecticides

WASHINGTON, D.C.— The horn fly (Haematobia irritans) -- a cattle pest especially abundant in the South -- is becoming resistant to pyrethroid insecticides. The problem, first noted in the mid-1980s in Florida, now afflicts every major cattle producing area of the U.S., including Hawaii and parts of Canada.

Strategies for combating the flies while minimizing further buildup of resistance have been put together by a federal-state-industry committee of researchers with the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Research Service, land-grant university research and extension specialists, and chemical industry representatives. The members are listed below the strategies.

Introduced into the U.S. during the late 1800s, horn flies spread rapidly across North America. Both sexes have needlelike beaks and suck blood from cattle and other animals. If enough flies are present, this can reduce weight gains or feed efficiency of cattle. Females lay eggs in dung pats ("cowpies"), where immature forms develop. The first of a year's several to many generations of flies appears from early spring to June.

If you see hundreds of horn flies per animal within days or weeks after using a recommended amount of pyrethroid, whether in ear tags or other formulations, the pests have probably become resistant.

Most researchers agree that fewer than 200 horn flies per animal probably don't cause measurable losses. Knowing this threshold of injury level, which can vary from place to place, allows managers to make informed decisions on whether and when to treat. It also means control does not have to be perfect.

If pyrethroid resistance exists in your area, applying any pyrethroid at any concentration in any formulation is not advised.

Pyrethroid ear tags can be used where the fly has not become resistant. But even if they remain effective, consider switching to an organophosphate ear tag or a bolus treatment for the peak fly season.

Cattle producers can get further information and assistance from cooperative extension specialists, located in most county seats or at land-grant universities.

Any of the strategies can be used singly or in combination with any of the others.

• Do not treat at all for horn flies. Cattle can tolerate moderate levels of horn flies (up to 200 per head, at least in the South), so not treating at all is an option throughout much of the U.S. This will likely have the greatest effect on reducing or slowing insecticide resistance. Fly traps that cattle walk through can be built, and use no insecticide.

• Separate mature animals from calves. There is no evidence that horn flies affect mature cattle other than lactating cows. Calves should be treated to obtain the most efficient feed conversion. Cows without calves probably should not be treated.

• Delay control until flies exceed the injury level. Economic thresholds and injury levels are good concepts to follow for integrated pest management. To avoid wasting insecticide and getting poor results, do not apply any until horn flies appear in the spring. Show cattle or other special animals, however, may require intensive treatment.

• Treat periodically with organophosphate (OP) sprays or dusts to reduce early build-up of fly populations. Insecticide resistance can be delayed or reduced by periodic treatments that give high levels of immediate control, followed by a period of no control during which the pest population again builds up. One or two such treatments in the early summer may delay the need for more sustained controls, which might include OP ear tags, dust bags, backrubbers, or oilers. If OP tags have been used for two years or so, a bolus containing an insect growth regulator (IGR) can be used to limit any organophosphate resistance.

• Treat with IGR boluses. IGRs are the newest insecticides available to combat the horn fly. They kill flies differently from OP or pyrethroid insecticides by preventing immature flies from becoming adults. IGRs do not affect adult behavior that may influence insecticide resistance.

• Treat late in the season. This should begin before the horn fly enters its overwintering phase. If adult flies are a problem after October, treat periodically with OP sprays or dust, or bolus (if not used earlier in the season).

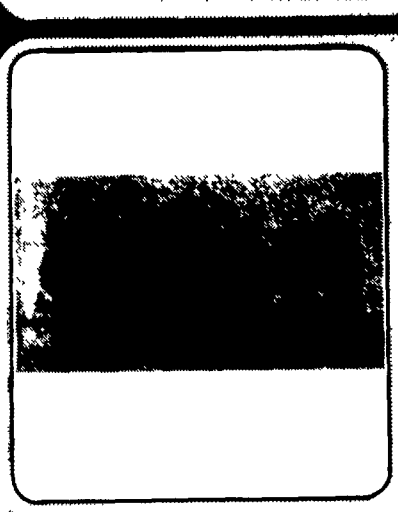
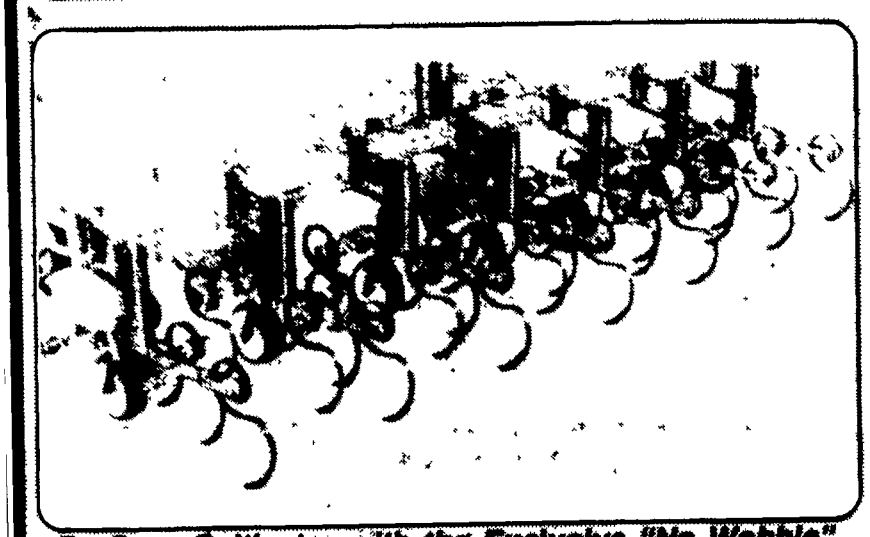
MEETS THE CHALLENGE Brillion ROLLING ON...IN THE 90's

"RO-CROP" CULTIVATORS 4-12 ROWS



NOT JUST ANOTHER CULTIVATOR

This hefty BRILLION "Ro-Crop" Cultivator has extra weight that other units don't have. Digs down... and stays down. Destroys deep-rooted weeds; doesn't dodge them. Four, six, eight and 12-row models, 30" and 40" row spacing. Non-twisting, high clearance shanks with 20" working space between gang frame and ground. Easily adjustable gauge wheels. Three point hitch. Rigid or folding toolbars. Transport kits.



Ro-Crop Cultivator with the Exclusive "No Wobble" Parallel Links

One of the weaknesses of many cultivators is that the parallel linkage is lightweight and bearing areas are small. All too soon the assembly starts to wear and break down. BRILLION'S NO WOBBLE links are made of cast iron (12 lbs. each). Each end is equipped with full 2" wide non-lube sleeve bearings. The BRILLION "S" tine cultivator (model BRS) four-way tooth movement is designed for high speed cultivation, especially in conjunction with chemical weed control. The "S" tines also mulch the soil and level the ground for easier harvesting. Available in rigid and folding models for four to 12 rows.

CULTIVATION ADDS 5 BUSHELS

Cultivating corn, even when weeds were not a problem, increased yields an average of 5 bushels per acre over two years at a research station near Monmouth in western Illinois.

Cultivation was used with three different tillage systems — fall moldboard plowing, fall chisel plowing and no-till. Cultivation showed the most benefit on plots that had been chisel plowed.

- Chiseled plots that were cultivated yielded 202 bushels in 1985 versus a little over 197 for the plots that weren't cultivated. In 1986, chiseled plots yielded almost 212 bushels with cultivation versus a little over 199 on plots that weren't cultivated.
- Moldboard plowed plots that were cultivated yielded nearly 209 bushels per acre in 1985 versus 202 for the plots that weren't cultivated. In 1986, cultivated plots yielded over 209 bushels per acre, less than a bushel more than plots that weren't cultivated.
- No-till plots that were cultivated yielded 174 bushels per acre in 1985 versus 158 for the plots that weren't cultivated.

While this study shows that cultivating corn when it is not necessary to control weeds may be beneficial some years with some tillage systems, researchers aren't yet ready to make a general recommendation based on two years of data. They also report that the yield differences with the three tillage systems was unexpected.

Livestock Notes

Encephalitis In Horses

During the late summer and early fall of 1989, many horses sickened and died of eastern encephalitis. This outbreak was principally in the coastal area along the Atlantic Ocean. However, many geographical areas can be affected. The 1989 episode pointed up the need for the veterinary profession to strengthen their actions against eastern equine encephalitis.

Reporting of clinically suspicious CNS cases or fatal cases of encephalitis is highly important. These cases should be reported to MDA field veterinarians or to a regional MDA animal health laboratory.

Experience has shown that horses vaccinated in February may not have enough protective antibodies in August to prevent sickness and death. Therefore, it is recommended that such horses be given a "booster" revaccination within 4-5 months so as to provide protection throughout the mosquito season.

Testing Of Horses For Export

Serological tests for equines being exported to England, Ireland, and France can now be done at any USDA-approved laboratory. Serum samples should not be sent to NVSL for testing. Please contact David F. Vogt, Area Veterinarian in Charge, MD/DE/DC, USDA:APHIS:VS at (301) 962-7726 if you have any questions.

Swine Health Documentation

The Maryland Department of Agriculture reminds citizens that all swine imported into the state require proper health documentation.

"In order to insure that Maryland maintains a healthy swine population, it is imperative that all swine entering Maryland have a proper permit, animal identification and health certificate," said Dr. Henry Virts, state veterinarian for the department's office of animal health and consumer services.

Swine import permits may be obtained by calling the Maryland Department of Agriculture, (301) 841-5810, between 8:30 a.m. and 4:40 p.m. Monday through Friday. In addition, the department has copies of the "Swine Imported Into Maryland" regulation available to anyone who is interested.

Furadan Toxicity In Washington County Cattle

A die-off of cattle occurred in Washington County, MD, during the period November 22 to December 4, 1989. About 10 cattle died during this time.

The owner had about 100 head of cross-bred steers, heifers, and brood cows kept in several different groups. Cattle were getting large round bales of fescue hay, and daily grain feedings. On November 22, he found two steers dead. Nothing was done about this. The following day he began feeding some corn silage from an upright silo. The silage had been made in 1988.

On November 26, eight more steers and heifers died. Affected animals first had quivering, then weaving in the hind end, they would collapse, breathe hard, convulse, and die. Some had tongue paralysis, which made the attending veterinarian consider botulism as a possibility. Salivation, diarrhea, and bloating were not seen. Several animals responded to atropine therapy.

Necropsied cattle had mostly hay in the rumens, normal rumen pH, and no visible lesions. Since the first two cattle to die had not eaten silage, this seemed an unlikely source of the problem. However, cattle did seem to get sick on November 26 soon after the daily grain was put out. Although the hay was eaten by all affected animals and was seen in the rumens, this was discounted as it seemed like an unlikely source of so many relatively fast deaths. A tremorgenic mycotoxin was a long-shot consideration at this point. Winter hemlock and jimpson weed contaminated hay were also considered. The owner insisted that there were no pesticides on his place.

On December 4, a brood cow got into the area where the other animals had died. According to the owner, she ate a mouthful of hay and then started eating silage. Shortly afterward she developed the same symptoms as the others, and died. Several English sparrows were found dead in the hay at the same time, which was unusual. They roosted just above the hay.

Toxicologic results became known at this time and high levels of furadan, a carbamate insecticide, were found in all rumen content samples. Oddly, however, furadan was also found in the only sample of hay which had been collected. The English sparrows as well were positive for furadan.

When the farmer heard that the hay contained furadan, he took it all to a rockbreak for disposal. No further losses occurred. A number of hay samples were collected from the hay at the rockbreak, but none were positive for furadan.

Household Hazardous Waste Topic Of Symposium

WEST CHESTER (Chester Co.) — Chester County Cooperative Extension is sponsoring a spring symposium on Tuesday, May 8, 1990, 10:00 a.m. to 2:30 p.m at Penn State's Great Valley Campus on Swedesford Road in Malvern, Pennsylvania.

According to the Clean Air Coincil of Philadelphia, the average household in the United States produces 160 pounds of household hazardous waste (HHW) every year. Symposium speaker Joan Batory, director, Chester County Solid Waste Authority, will discuss landfills, effects on adjacent homeowners, and proper disposal techniques of HHW. Robert Thee, extension agent/housing and environment, will address the consumer issues of identification, better product choices, and alternatives for HHW.

After lunch (price included in registration fee), Richard T. Wood, environmental education specialist, Chester County Parks and Recreation Department, will present "Going, Going . . . Gone — Pennsylvania's Rare and Endangered Species," during which participants will discover the importance of managing wildlife habitat.

The registration fee of $8.50 includes choice of lunch (chef salad, chicken salad, or ham and cheese), program, educational materials and exhibits, and campus tour. Registration is required by April 30, 1990. Contact the Chester County Cooperative Extension, (215) 696-3500.

N.Y. Bull Sale May 4

ITHACA, N.Y. — A record-setting group of yearling beef bulls will be sold at the New York Bull Sale on Friday, May 4, at 7:00 p.m. in the Livestock Pavilion of Cornell University.

Overall, the 99 bulls representing 59 breeders in six states had a fifth weigh period (140 days) average daily gain (ADG) of 3.57 lbs. This resulted in a new NY Bull Test record cumulative ADG of 4.02 lbs. and a record weight per day of age (WPDA) of 3.27 lbs.

Forty-nine of the bulls have met sale certification standards. To certify, a bull must have a minimum 140-day gain ratio of 0.95; a WPDA ratio of 0.95; a minimum frame score of 4 for British breeds and 5 for European breeds; type (conformation) score at least 12; have maximum backfat of 0.48 inches; and be judges adequate in breeding and structural soundness. Four bulls from those certifying also achieved "Certified Superior" status. To accomplish this, their gain and WPDA ratio must be at least 1.10 and have a minimum type (conformation) score of 14.

The sale order will begin with Angus, followed by Chianina, Simmental, Gelbvieh, Hereford, Charolais, Shorthorn, Red Angus, and Polled Hereford.

Eighteen Angus will be offered with the first two bulls having achieved "Certified Superior" rank. Bull #95027 sired by Grubbs MacKenzie and consigned by Ballantrae Angus Farm, Westfield, NY had a 5th period ADG of 3.95 lbs., a cumulative ADG of 4.63 lbs. (ratio 1.15), and a WPDA of 3.67 lbs. (ratio 1.14). The other "Certified Superior" Angus, #95056, is also a son of Grubbs MacKenzie and is consigned by Bippert's Farm, Alden, NY. He had a fifth period ADG of 4.12 lbs., a cumulative ADG of 4.45 lbs. (ratio 1.11), and a WPDA of 3.57 lbs. (ratio 1.11). Overall, the 30 Angus bulls on test had a period ADG of 3.73 lbs., a cumulative ADG of 4.11 lbs. and a WPDA of 3.24 lbs.

The one Chianina (#95064) qualified for the sale with a 5th period ADG of 4.42 lbs., a cumulative ADG of 4.27 lbs. (ratio 1.07), and a WPDA of 3.43 lbs. (ratio 1.01). This bull is sired by VF Prospector CA, and consigned by People/Mapleview Ranch, Volant, PA.

Four of the twenty Simmental bulls consigned certified. The top Simmental (#95077) is consigned by Shoemaker's Simmental, Manns Choice, PA. Sired by Payroll, this bull had a 5th weigh ADG of 4.55 lbs., a cumulative ADG of 5.09 lbs. (ratio 1.27), and a WPDA of 3.42 lbs. (ratio 1.01). Together, the Simmental bulls on test had a period weight of 3.64 lbs., a cumulative ADG of 3.93 lbs., and a WPDA of 3.38 lbs.

Latest Developments

1. PREPARATION - High volume water blasting at 1,000 lb. pressure re-surfaces barn siding into a smooth (like new) appearance!
   a. Performed by professionals quickly at reasonable cost.
   b. By yourself with your own or rented equipment.
   c. Or other more conventional methods.
2. APPLICATION - To insure better adherence to this super prepared surface, use the best fine bristle brush in four directions to evenly distribute the recommended mil thickness of seal coat coverage.
3. SPECIALIZATION - Every barn is different but generally it's best to use a high quality mildew resistant product, specially formulated to meet the requirements of this partially weathered wood that was and will be weather stressed.
4. WARNING - The modified oil latex is less effective as a wood preserver and actually increases nail & metal deterioration. Deal with home people. At their rates, I could double mine.

We have undertaken a big project with the selling of the Dodd Farms herd, and are very proud to make available to you one of the best commercial herds in the country. Most herds of this size do not have the high quality you will find at Dodds. If you need a good cow, there should be one here for you.

This sale was not planned and if you are looking for fancy pedigrees, don't waste your time -- they have not classified the herd in years. However, they are on official test and Dodds have faithfully used their SCC as a tool for culling. Only the best individuals and the lowest SCC animals remain. Some say they have culled too hard. This is the way Dodds chose to upgrade their herd.

Come to Michael Angelos after the sale on Thursday. Enjoy a good meal and then we can talk cows.
